A Flat Earth
Presumptuous Farmers
Mysteries of Food
And Engaged Girls

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Mr. Voliva, the "prophet" of Zion City, says the earth is not round, but flat. Thus Zion City's children are taught.

There is more in that than mere stupidity, refusing plain truth that patience might make clear to a chimpanzee. Mr. Voliva knows his people, knows that they accept his mental trash, because it is more easily swallowed than hard fact. Kruger of the Transvaal also said the earth was flat, that's one reason why the English got him and his land. Superstition loses its fight in these days.

From Voliva you learn how strongly men cling to old falsehood, how they hate new truth. Every really great inventor, statesman and thinker has known how men cling to error original and even invent new brands of "error" to escape unpleasant thought. Thinking to the average man is like standing on its hind legs to a dog, possible but unpleasant. Both become impossible as dog and man get old.

Farmers now demand minimum prices for five of their products, to "stabilize" their work and make it safe. Sugar, wheat, corn, cotton and wool are suggested as worthy of a minimum price government guarantee, which would mean "If nobody else buys it, the government must."

That program will cost, say its opponents, from $250,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 a year. What a howl will rise if the thing develops, especially from statement that gave railroads not only minimum rates, but guaranteed dividends, and that allowed $1 a year patriots to take billions. It excites certain patriots greatly, when you talk of doing anything for farmers.

How much do you know about food, the material of which you are made, physically? A restaurant that advertises intelligently tells you: "Animals fed on a diet from which all mineral salts have been removed die in a shorter time than animals from whom all food is withheld."

The wrong food is worse than none; it clogs the system. The scientific department of Hearst's Magazine shows you a rat fed exclusively on butter, very healthy, and as fat as the butter. Another rat, fed only on lard, died of starvation, but had all the lard it wanted. No vitamines in lard. Diet is mysterious. Luckily the nerves of the palate have the knowledge we lack, and guide us in our choice. Keep them normal and they guide safely.

Northwestern University girls in Chicago, not allowed to wear engagement rings, let their engaged or unengaged condition be known by their method of wearing galoshes. Goloshes unbuckled mean "I am not engaged"; buckled, the reverse.

True or not, it's old. In certain South American tribes the gentleman stands the lady up against a tree and knocks out her two upper middle front teeth, to show that she belongs to him alone. In the East a lady stains her teeth jet black! It means "don't bother me, I'm busy." David Belasco tells you that a Japanese girl who ties her "obi" in front, instead of tying the huge sash in the rear, is "not such a very good girl as she might be." In some countries hair up means "don't bother me"; hair down means "come around." Men, you will notice, get along nicely without those warnings, the majority not even wearing wedding rings when they might. A lady says rings should be compulsory for married men, to warn girls. But they would have to be welded on too tight to slip over the knuckle. Men are tricky, women are not.

Senator Borah says the nations seek to ruin Germany, but that is not quite accurate. Lloyd George does not want Germany dead. Not, as the Englishman said, that he cares a d—— but because a dead neighbor next door is unpleasant.

France wants all that Germany has, a little more if possible, and wants her kept permanently crippled, that she may not be dangerous, rather a difficult program. This glorious country seems not to know exactly what it DOES want, or that of any other international question. We are strangely deficient in plans, except when England lands us one ready-made. And England has plenty of them for herself or Japan. But do not blame or dislike England—never blame intelligence. England is attending to her business, and knows how.

All taxation is unpleasant. But how would our prosperous ones feel if the new German plan were tried here? In addition to taxes, Germany levies a "forced" loan of one thousand million marks in gold, $250,000,000, to start with. First you are taxed, next you must lend, at very low interest. It's an awful strain on the patriot who feels that he owes his country nothing.

A treaty between France and Kemal, the fighting Turk, giving him $200,000,000 francs worth of fighting material, guns, uniforms, etc., interests the Paris newspapers. It will interest the Greeks also, and the English that are sick of fighting in the East, and long for business to replace war.

It might interest us a little, for the "fighting material" very likely includes American supplies sold to France for next to nothing. Wellused by Kemal in new wars, those supplies might cost us more than we got for them, in "loans to our dear brother allies," etc.

DESCRIBES BURNING KISSES OF DICKERMAN

Gives Glowing Account of Ardent Courtship While Couple Were Overseas

The glowing story of "ten wonderful nights" in Paris, a dozen love-letters, ardent and devoted, and the description of the burning kisses he showered upon her lips, formed the features of the day's developments at the trial of the $100,000 alienation of affection suit, brought by Mrs. Eugenie E. Dickerman of Somerville against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman, also of Somerville, before Judge Stanley E. Qua in East Cambridge Court today.

Mrs. Eugenie E. Dickerman, arched in a chic blue velvet gown, patent leather shoes and gray spats, an opossum neckpiece and a becoming little hat trimmed with tiny rosebuds and snowdrops but was again on the stand under direct examination by her attorney, Alvah L. Stinson.

She appeared self-possessed, but from time to time her slim hands, covered with gray silk gloves, would press the nose glasses she wore into place with a nervous gesture.

One of the letters, written to her by the defendant woman in the suit, brought out the fact that Mrs. Eugenie Dickerman, then Mrs. Edgar M.

BLACKMAIL BOSS ASKED $125,000

Confessed to Allen as Revenge After Price of Silence Was Not Forthcoming

Before confessing to Attorney General Allen, former District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County, long boss of Boston's "Blackmail Ring," demanded $75,000 from one of his alleged confederates and $50,000 from another and was turned down by both, according to disclosures today.

This angered Corcoran, but it was not this alone that prompted him to "squeal." In his opinion and according to the claims of his sympathizers, other promises were broken and Corcoran felt that he had been made "the goat and was being railroaded."

Once this notion became fixed he renewed his demands for financial assistance, and, finding that deaf ears were turned to his pleas, he resolved to have revenge.

According to the latest filterings from the underworld, the original plan was for Corcoran to flee to parts unknown, and remain away. He and his dependents were to be well provided for.

Mexico was named as the safest and most accessible place of refuge. Corcoran claims that the Boston attorney who promised to finance him was the one who suggested that he go to Mex-

NEW YORK BANDITS GET $4,500 PAYROLL

New York, Jan. 27.—Two robbers today held up a pay clerk of the Borden Farms Product Company at 133d street and escaped with pay envelopes containing $4,500.

DISABLED SUBMARINE ADRIFT.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—The United States submarine T-2 is disabled off Cape Henlopen and drifting about helpless, according to a radio message received at the Navy Yard here. The naval tug Arapahoe at Cape May, is steaming to her assistance.

PLAISTOW WOMAN DIES IN THREE-STORY LEAP

Haverbille, Jan. 27. — Mrs. Junita Challis jumped from the third story of the Hale Hospital today while in a delirium, and was found dead in the snow by a nurse and watchman some minutes later. Mrs. Challis was fifty-four years old and lived in Plaistow, N. H. She was undergoing treatment for ulcers of the stomach.

SOUTH BOSTON MEN IN AUTO CRASH UNHURT

Harding Orders U. S. Work Speeded to Help Jobless

Washington, Jan. 27 (By International News Service).—President Harding today instructed six Cabinet officers to "speed up" plans in their departments for the accomplishment of all possible public works in the remaining months of the Winter in order that the unemployment situation may further be alleviated.

The President's instructions were contained in a letter to Secretaries of War, Navy, Treasury, Commerce, Interior, and Agriculture.

The President stated that the "most difficult period of the Winter is still before us," and that the government should duplicate the splendid efforts at alleviation of unemployment which have been made by the various municipalities, States and private concerns.

STILLMAN WINS FIGHT AGAINST CANADIAN FEE

New York, Jan. 27.—James A. Stillman has won his fight against giving Mrs. Anne U. Stillman $7,500 to conduct Canadian hearings in the divorce suit instituted by the husband.

Today the appellate division of the Supreme Court reversed a decision by Justice Morschauser directing the banker to pay Mrs. Stillman this sum for the expenses of carrying her defence across the border. The opinion, signed by five justices, held that Mrs. Stillman already had been given sufficient money for her defence.

WOMAN AND BABY DIE IN TENEMENT FIRE

New York, Jan. 27.—A woman and an eighteen-months-old baby perished, twelve others were injured and twenty-five persons were carried down ladders by firemen in a fire in a four-story Brooklyn tenement house today. Eight families occupied the house. The dead are Mrs. Emma Stundell, forty-three, and George Obermeyer, eighteen-months-old son of Mr and Mrs. Alfred Obermeyer.

LILLIAN CONRAD IN HIDING

Father of Garland's "Twin Soul" Says She Will Be Spared Annoyance

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—Lillian Conrad, the Philadelphia student and "twin soul" of Charles Garland, the Massachusetts idealist, has been sent away to a place where she will be free from further annoyance.

This statement was made today by L. A. Conrad, father of the girl, at his home, No. 1728 North Sydenham street. He is greatly broken in spirit over the misguided romance of his daughter, who went to live with Garland, a married man, because she considered him her ideal soulmate.

While reports of the unusual romance were at their height it appears that Conrad managed to bring his daughter to this city and then sent her quietly away.

Conrad gave out the following dictated statement today:

"I feel now that a brief statement from me is due regarding our daughter, Lillian Conrad.

"This is a most unfortunate and shocking affair to be brought to us.

"There is no money involved in this incident.

"Everything has been done that parents of moderate circumstances could do to give her a good education and social standing, and everything is now being done to protect her from further annoyance.

"She returned to her home, but is not in Philadelphia at present, which closes the incident in so far as she is concerned.

"J. S. CONRAD."

WOULD ABSOLVE BELGIUM OF WAR DEBT BURDEN

Washington, Jan. 27.—A plea that Belgium be absolved of all debts incurred by her in the World War was voiced today by Senator John Sharp Williams, Democrat, of Mississippi, when the Senate resumed consideration of the $17,000,000,000 foreign debt refunding bill. Williams asserted that it would be "a lasting shame" if Belgium's allies in the World War "compelled her to pay her debts to them."

FORBES HERE FEB. 11 TO URGE NAUTICAL SCHOOL

Director Forbes of the Veterans' Bureau at Washington will be in Boston February 11 to seek support for his plan to establish a government nautical training school for exservice men. He will also inspect facilities here for the proposed school. From Boston he will travel to several other cities on the Atlantic seaboard.

CASHIER IS KILLED BY BANDITS

Bank in Pittsburgh Suburb Looted of $95,000; Gun Battle With Police Follows

By Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 27.—Five bandits today robbed the First National Bank of Crafton, a suburb, of $15,000 in money and $80,000 in Liberty Bonds, after killing Harold Moss, assistant cashier, who tried to defend the institution.

The men escaped in an automobile, but were intercepted on the north side by a party of city detectives on their way to the scene of the robbery. After a spectacular pistol battle the men abandoned their car and sought shelter in a house on Pennsylvania avenue, not far from the Fort Wayne yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The house was surrounded, but the bandits escaped. George McCandless, Director of Public Safety, threw a cordon of police around the entire section of the city, with instructions to guard every street and search all houses.

Mississippi Motor Firm Robbed of $180,000

Hattiesburg, Miss., Jan. 27.—The Girault Motor Company of this city was robbed of $180,000 in bonds and commercial paper early today by two men who held up the night clerk, according to a report to the police.

WOMAN ESCAPES FIRE BY 'SLIDE FOR LIFE'

Mrs. Hubert A. Doucette, thirty-four years old, of No. 43 Pine street, Waltham, made a "slide for life" during a fire at her home, which had all the thrills of a circus performance.

Her four-year-old son, sent to the attic of the two-and-a-half-story house to play, set fire to a mattress. Mrs. Doucette, smelling the smoke, ran to the attic and succeeded in partially beating out the flames. When she tried to go downstairs with the boy, she found she could not open the attic door, as the knob had been broken off on the inside.

So she climbed out a window and crawled along the roof until she reached the telephone wires running down the side of the house. Mrs. Doucette slid down the wires to the ground, "braking" with the felt slippers she wore.

Then she climbed in a first-story window and telephoned for the fire department. Firemen found the fire still smouldering.

This Is the Time to Look for Bargains in Used Cars

Now is the time to look because now the fanciers of automobiles are turning their thoughts to new models. Naturally they sell their older cars—and old except by comparison with the new ones they are buying.

These sales offer a wonderful opportunity to the man who wants a good car at a price.

Investigation will not only prove that they look like new, but that they are capable of giving the service of a new car. Truly wonderful finds, some of them.

Look out now for an automobile for Spring. Read the offerings today over in The American's "Automobile Exchange" columns and then see the cars that are offered there. It is the most satisfactory way possible to find a good used car.

Young, a woman of considerable means, had been in the past the Sunday school teacher of her present husband, Robert Eliot Dickerman.

HAD SON OVERSEAS.

In that letter the elder Mrs. Dickerman wrote that she wished to thank "Mrs. Young" for all the kindness and "motherly consideration and attention" she had given Robert Dickerman, and that the writer was "amazed to hear from Robert that in you he had met his former Sunday school teacher."

The letter then said it "must be such a delight to you to be in the same country with your own boy, and to know that you are near him if anything happens."

This was the first public hint since the opening of the trial that Mrs. Dickerman had a son old enough to be a member of the A. E. F.

In her reply to this letter, also read into the record, Mrs. Young, as she then was replied that "my boy has been in Germany, but he came to Paris for Christmas and he and Robert had a great time together running about in Paris."

"YEARNED FOR YOU."

One of the letters introduced in evidence as having been written by Dickerman to the plaintiff while she was doing war relief work in Paris during the war and he was the driver of a Red Cross ambulance at Milan, Italy. At the time it was testified, Mrs. Dickerman, then Mrs. Edgar M. Young, was forty-four years old and Dickerman was twenty-seven.

The letter was dated from the Marinto Grand Hotel, Milan, where Dickerman was stopping during a lull in the work at the front. It began: "Dearest Heart o' Mine! I had break fast in bed followed by a smoke, a cordial and your letter, which was brought up to me by a friend. I declined to get up, but lay thinking of you and, oh, how I yearned for you by my side."

In another place the letter, which is very lengthy, says that he is "talking things easy. You may call me lazy boy, if you want, but for a week I have had but little sleep on account of my tooth. I do feel guilty, however, when I think of you slaving there in Paris, and doing such noble, useful work, God! How proud I am of you."

A little further on the letter says:

THEDA BARA OUTCLASSED.

"Some day, dearest, you and I are going to have a little car built just for two, in which to go roaming around the country, won't we dear?" and in yet another paragraph he writes:

"I think that chap must have been cockeyed if he thought you looked like Theda Bara. Good Gawd! You have her beaten a mile, and I would not give you up for all the Thedas in the wide, wide world."

The letter is signed, "Your Own and Only Sonny Boy."

Under direct examination Mrs. Dickerman then told the court of a visit paid by Dickerman to her in Paris in July, 1918. He had leave from Milan, and "rushed to Paris as fast as the train could take him. He came to me even before he had washed his face."

Attorney Stinson then asked the witness regarding "those ten wonderful nights" to which she had referred in her testimony yesterday.

They followed, she explained, the arrival of Dickerman in Paris that July, and during that visit they spent virtually the entire time together, seeing the wonders of the French city.

UNTIL 4 A. M.

Stinson asked if they had ever spent a whole night together.

"No," replied the witness, "but there was one night when he left me about four in the morning.

"And during this period," asked the attorney, "did Mr. Dickerman tell you that he loved you—was love mentioned at all?"

"Mentioned," exclaimed Mrs. Dickerman, "we talked of nothing else. He swore that he worshipped me and wanted me to marry him at once. I told him though that I would be better to wait until after war was over.

"I told him that by that time he might have changed, might not want me any more. He laughed at that. Then he broke down and told me he was disgraced and never could go home."

This was in reference to an incident in connection with Dickerman's record overseas which has not yet been brought out in testimony.

"I told him," went on Mrs. Dickerman, "that he was foolish—to be a man and play the game straight and that all would come out all right.

"He told me that he would if I would only stick to him, and I promised to do so."

SPORADIC KISSING.

"At this time," asked Stinson, "had Dickerman ever kissed you?"

A slow smile spread over the features of the witness.

"Oh, yes," she said. "He wanted to be kissing me all the time."

"The kisses were continuous, then?" said Stinson.

"No—more—more sporadic, as it were," smiled the witness.

Both she and her husband, Robert Eliot Dickerman, are very prominent in Somerville, as is the defendant in the suit, Mrs. Minnie Dickerman.

After the war the two were married in Chicago on July 8, 1919. In June of the following year the youthful husband—he is not yet thirty—left her, she charges, at the instigation of his mother. And the wife promptly brought suit against the mother for $100,000.

CALLED HER "GOOD ANGEL."

Mrs. Dickerman testified that when she returned from France, Dickerman's enthusiasm knew no bounds.

"He called me his good angel, his savior and swore that he could not live without me," she said. "When ever he came into my presence he would seize me in his arms and kiss me with all the ardor of youth in love.

"When I went to New York to greet my son, who was returning from the war, he wrote me that he had been drinking and that my mother is wise and is off of me for a while. He signed his letter, 'Always lovingly, Your Sonny Boy.'

"Once when he was away I wrote him when I was in a somewhat melancholy mood, and he wrote: 'I am just heartbroken, you are so unhappy and blue, Dear Heart. But cheer up, better days are coming. If I had some money we could fly away together and be happy—but I haven't worse luck. God bless you, old dear, I do love you.' The letter was superscribed 'With hugs and heaps of love from your Sonny Boy.'

MADE ME HAPPIEST BOY IN THE WORLD

Dearest Love:

I think Bet's letter was a peach. She does love you as your own Sonny Boy does. I certainly would like to meet her, being such a good friend of my dear one. Am returning her letter to you. That G—— certainly is a rotten skunk, and that is speaking mildly—the "dirty hun." I don't see what he has to rave about. I feel like bawling out one who does that. I'll bet she was disgusted with him. I am awfully sorry to hear your teeth hurt. I do hope there are all well and your cold is gone. Please, again, I beg you dear, keep in good health. Yes, my darling, you have done wonders and have made me the happiest boy in the world, but can I hold you is what I am wondering now. I hope you didn't go with that captain. You know you promised me you wouldn't go with anyone, and I have been very faithful to you, dear. If I thought you went back on me it would simply kill me, as I can't give you up, and trust and believe you always, dear. Please be careful of yourself, dear. I just thought of him all night and hate him. Money isn't everything in the world, dear; and if I had it to spend, which I will in a few years, I will spend it likewise. You speak of my having pleasure is nothing without you, dear. Nobody means anything to me or induces me to do anything but you, dear, as I simply love you dearly and can't live without you, darling. Please don't leave me for someone else—will you, dear.

Please don't worry, I beg of you again, as I shall keep in good health and there aren't any complications that will get me dear as I am all your only, and you aren't depriving me of any pleasure, dearest, except that you are so far away and I miss and love you so, sweetheart. I, too, cry at times for you. I love you and want to see you so and think of you every minute. I couldn't get you out of my mind if I wanted to, which I certainly don't so you see, sweetheart, you can make or break me. You will never grow old or ugly, dearest. Why mention such foolish things? You are simply wonderful in my view. Well, darling mine, I must go to lunch and snatch a bite. With fost heaps and heaps of love to my darling sweetheart, and miss me and wanting her so much, I am always and forever,

HER OWN SONNY BOY.

"WISH YOU WERE HERE TO TAKE ME IN YOUR ARMS."

Kewanee, Ill., July 10, 1919.

My dearest wife:

I hope you arrive safely tomorrow morning. It certainly is a beastly time to land anywhere. I hope you will not be too lonesome out there and will be contented and get a good rest and come back to me looking pink and rosy and a young June bride, which you are, dear.

I wrote to the Life Insurance Company this evening and told them to change my policy over to my wife, so you will get $2,000 if I croak in the near future, but we are going to be so happy together for many years, aren't we, sweetheart, before that happens.

It is now bedtime, so must close. Wish you were here to crawl in and hold me in your loving arms.

With heaps and heaps of love, dear, YOUR DEVOTED AND LOVING HUBBY.

SAD BECAUSE HE COULDN'T SEND 'CIGS'

Dickerman Wrote He Opened Them Himself Then and Smoked Each One to Her

Feb. 11, 1918.
Hotel Metropole
Milan

My dearest one:

Just after mailing you a letter Saturday evening and getting into bed, two fellows came in with a girl that smelt of face powder to Heaven, and showed her into our room.

I thought we would have a fight right then and there but we shoved her out and locked the door. But they sat each side of me—dammer till 2 o'clock. I didn't get up until noon.

W... dearest one, I have a little bad news to tell you in that it is impossible for me to send you those cigarettes even by way of my chum. I brought them down here with me and went to the postoffice today and they told me it was impossible to send "cigs" to anyone, so as I was out of them myself I tore open the box with a sad heart and feel very guilty smoking them myself when you have none at all but I hope by now you have got some.

EVerything I smoke to you and our happiness in the future. I am terribly sorry, dear heart, I couldn't get them off to you, but, I tried my best and you know my intentions were on the right side, don't you, dear?

You had better not write to me here as there is no telling when we will move.

I simply had to write my darling before returning. I hope, dear heart, you have heard good news from R. by now and that you will tell me all those things.

I asked you in my last letter, as I was terribly blue and lonesome, and miss you terribly and just worry and think of you every minute of the day and way on right through the night.

If anything happens to you, dearest one, it will kill me.

I miss you so, dear, as I can hardly hold my head up.

I remain always missing and loving you heaps and heaps, and waiting you more than anything in the whole wide world.

YOUR OWN SONNY BOY.

LOST HIS "PEP" WHEN SHE WAS GOING HOME

March 4, 1918.

My darling Sweetheart:

I got a letter from you yesterday afternoon and it was a godsend, as I hadn't heard from you for close on to five days. You are honestly quite, quite wrong, dearest, when you say you don't believe I miss you just because I happened to be trotting around. Why not make the best of it when you can, but when you told me that you were going back to the States about the first of May it simply took all the pep out of me, dearest mine. I do hope sincerely that you can find something when your time is up. Of course I see how it is and I curse every time I think of it that I am not a bit older and started so you could be dependent on me, as I will gladly give you all I can, but then, I can't do much now. As you know, dear, I'd give everything I have, as what is mine is also yours, dear. But it will be hell to return to Paris and not find you there, as I have been longing and looking forward to that happy day. Please try your best to stay until the first of July, will you, dearest mine?

Honestly, didn't see much of that American woman and she didn't mean anything to me. You know that, dear—there is only one woman in the world who does mean to me—can you guess who it is? Anyway, dear heart, you are no long when you didn't go to the Marquise—I pray every day that you will keep well and in good spirits and that you have given me the blues when I think of you going home before I can see you, as there is no telling when I shall see you if you're away out West and then you may find somebody and then it will be goodby little Bobbie.

Please be careful of your cold. You simply worry me to death, dear. I hope you have received the money by now. I know that what you would whisper to me, dear, and you know what I would whisper to you, too, dear girl. But I miss you dreadfully also, dearest, and I couldn't help it if I wanted to, and I certainly don't want to. Was chilly today and I just had a glass of wine to your health.

Well, darling mine, I must close this and get it off in the mail. Kissing and loving my dearest one, heaps and heaps—your own,

SONNY BOY.

Some of the Ardent Love Notes in Dickerman $100,000 Suit

Following are some of the ardent love letters which figure in the $100,000 alienation suit of Mrs. Eugenie E. Dickerman against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman, now on trial in East Cambridge. They were written to Eugenie Dickerman by her youthful husband and former Sunday school pupil, Robert Eliot-Dickerman:

"SIMPLY CAN'T LIVE WITHOUT YOU, DEAR."

Milan, March 20.

Gene, my sweetheart:

I went down to the consul's office and found two dear letters from you, darling, and you can't imagine what a relief they were to me, dear. Oh! I am so glad you are well again.

I should say you all have had quite a time of it in Paris with the air raids. Thank Heavens you are still safe. I thought it strange that you didn't get some of my letters, as I thought I had been quite faithful in writing my dear sweetheart.

Please now, dearest one, I beg once again take good care of your dear self.

I can't simply live without you, dear. If you do go West, "what odds," didn't make me very happy, dear. What would I do if anything happened to my darling? However, I have been very good for two months and can be so for many more, 'til we meet again.

I certainly do hope you can find something good so you can stay longer for I can't bear to have you leave me here and be so far away, as I am afraid you will meet somebody else in your wanderings.

Had several cocktails and a good lunch today. Well, dear, I miss you something awful more and more each day.

With all the love in the world to my darling sweetheart.

"HER OWN SONNY BOY."

OCEANS AND OCEANS OF LOVE TO YOU, DARLING.

March 30, 1918.

Dearest Mine:

They did not bring me out a letter from you from Milan this afternoon, but I could hardly expect one after receiving four most delightful ones yesterday from you, dear heart.

But I do love them so and they mean so much to me that I want one every minute.

Thursday morning we expect to leave here for the front.

Yesterday I received two letters from Fanny Gray and a carton of cigarettes from her and oh, my love, how I wish I could send my dearest one some of them, but, alas, it is no use. Everyone I smoke. I smoke to you, dear heart, having you at my side enjoying them with me.

I hope you receive the three cans of canned heat I sent you safely. Let me know when you receive them, won't you, dear?

It was a dandy shame I couldn't get them to you earlier so that you might have had them when you were so ill.

So tomorrow is Easter Sunday and how I wish I could be with my dear old sweetheart. I miss you to no end and want to be with my dear old sweetheart every minute. I do hope, dearest one, that you are feeling fine again now.

With just oceans and oceans of love to you, darling, and waiting for you so. .

I am always your

SONNY BOY.

LIFE NOTHING TO ME; YOU ARE MY ONLY EXISTENCE.

February 24, 1918.

Milan.

Dearest Heart:

We got on a little dancing at the hotel with an American and Australian lady. Maybe that music and dancing didn't make me long for you. I went to bed and just cried for you last night. I missed you so and wanted you.

God, dearest mine, but I do love and want you so. I know you will get deathly sick of my repeating this so often, but I can't help doing so. You mean everything to me, dear. Life is nothing to me. Really, darling, you are my only existence.

Nighty night, my own love.

GO TO BED KISSING AND LOVING YOU TERRIBLY.

Milan.

February 23, 1918.

Dearest Heart:

Today and yesterday no letter came from you and I have been blue and lonesome as hell. I thought once I would get one today. I didn't get one yesterday. Dearest mine, won't you, please, write me as often as you can, as I simply live by your letters. You don't know what they mean to me.

Oh, I miss you so, dearest mine, so much I could cry. When shall we see each other again—dearest heart. Do you think you will go back to America before the first of July? Oh, I hope not, as it will about kill me if you do, as I want to see you so much. Well, dearest of mine, and only one I have in the world, I must go to bed kissing and loving you terribly. I am always your true sonny boy.

PROMISED TO BE TRUE IF SHE WOULD ALSO

Dearest Sweetheart:

Another dear letter came this morning and Oklahoma brought it just as I started my breakfast, so you can imagine how much I enjoyed my breakfast. You spoke of it as being a Sunday school letter—quite the contrary, dearest—merely a good, sound letter which I appreciate very much. I, too, wished it had been two cognacs and port. Those certainly were very pleasant evenings, weren't they, dear heart. My dearest one, you are not denying me any pleasure at all, even if I am extremely human—there is only one dearest who gives me the real pleasure and I can't go with others, now that I love you, as it isn't fair to you. If you are true to me, I will be likewise to you, dear, so please don't worry, dear, and let me have it that way.

I'll bet you look just grand in that new hat and dress, and wish I were there to go with you in them. Now, dearest mine, I shall never forget loving you and shall always do so, and couldn't do otherwise, but I shall also be true to you because I love you—Heaven only knows how much—and you have made me the happiest person alive. I loved no one who didn't love me, but now I have you who loves me in return, so why shouldn't I be happy and true to you, dear? I sent the money in a registered letter and have the receipt. Perhaps it was delayed more than the other. I hope you get it safely and when you do please let me know at once. I only wish I could send you a thousand times more, but cheer up, darling, better days are on the way. I know my darling is not selfish or jealous and loves me dearly, and, maybe her own Sonny Boy doesn't do likewise.

Hate to think of sitting up all night in the rain, but I have you, dear, to think of which means a lot.

YOUR OWN SONNY BOY.

"MISS AND LOVE YOU, DARLING, JUST HEAPS."

March 18, 1918.

Milan.

Gene, my sweetheart:

As there is no maid out from Milan on Sundays, I will not get one from you, dear, today.

There were only three letters again in yesterday's miserable mail, but none for me. I hope, dear, so much that you are much better and up on your feet once more.

I harly expected one yesterday from you being so ill as you are, and you were a darling to write when you could hardly hold up your head.

You can't imagine how much I appreciate them and what they all mean to me, dear.

One fellow in Section 1 up near where we are going, killed a man the other day, so I don't expect we will get a very warm reception when we arrive up in that vicinity.

Well, my dearest, and only one, I pray this will find you feeling so much better and in good health again, as I can't bear to have my darling ill and me so far away and in good health.

Missing and loving you, dearest, just heaps. Your Sonney Boy.

VICTIM PAID WHEN TRAPPED TO AVOID PUBLICITY

CHAPTER 5

In my illness my heart again yearned for my erstwhile benefactor, and despite what had happened, he came back to me. Of course he was ignorant of my part in the affair.

Then began another delightful period, during which I foolishly thought my evil connections were at an end.

How little I knew. I had hardly become well and strong once more when the gang began to annoy me. I was summoned to the office of one of their number, where I was told they had another chance to make money. They told me I was a wonderful actress, and would make a perfect vamp.

They blinded me with flattery and they quietly made the declaration that they had the goods on me now, as a result of the part I had taken in the shakedown, and if I went on through they would make things decidedly unpleasant. I was appalled. Was there to be no lasting peace for me? Apparently not. It seemed as though I were doomed to go through life the tool of these unscrupulous men, leading other and more credulous men into traps.

OWNED BY GANG.

I gave in. There was nothing else to do. The gang owned me body and soul. Their will was my will.

They then informed me that a certain hotel man, who was a member of the gang, had told them of a wealthy man who was stopping at the hotel and who was very susceptible to young women. The gang had arranged that I was to trap him, with the assistance of another young woman who has been mentioned in the newspapers as the sweetheart of a prominent official.

The other girl was taken to the lawyer's office and we were told what to do. The gang paid the hotel man would tell his guest about us, and we were to be in the hotel dining room at a certain day. We were to respond to any overtures he made. The victim was known to have a man friend with him, and the other girl was provided for that reason.

On the day in question the girl and I went to the hotel and lunched in the dining room. Of course, the money was furnished by the gang, who paid all expenses. I was pointed out to the victim by the hotel man, who had told him and his friend a lot of nice things about both of us girls. The man who was to be "taken" answer to our table and made himself known. Realizing what was expected of us, we carried out the machinations, the result that he invited us to dinner. I might say that the gang had learned this man's friend had no money, so they were not concerned particularly with him.

WINE FLOWED FREELY.

Arrangements for dinner were made in the man's apartment, where he introduced us to his friend. That night we all met and had dinner in the hotel. Wine flowed like water and being quite intoxicated, which was usually the case, we got along well.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the host suggested that the entire party of four adjourn to his apartment. We agreed and all went upstairs. Hardly had we gotten inside when the door was burst open and four members of the gang appeared.

"What does this mean?" asked the host, who was badly frightened.

"It means," replied one of the gang, "that you are caught here with two married women, and you can be sent to jail for it. We represent the husband of one of these women, who is seeking evidence for a divorce. You doubt the husband of the other would be glad to get the women have seen. It's a very serious matter."

FRIEND WAS FRIGHTENED.

Thoughts of the divorce court flashed through the mind of the man, judging by his appearance, because he became as pale as a ghost. His friend, although he had no money and was therefore safe did he but know it, appeared equally frightened.

"The victim telephoned for the manager, who came in, very much excited and apparently horrified by the situation.

"This is an awful thing to happen in our house," he said, "but of course it will be better for all concerned to have it kept quiet. I will get you a good lawyer."

WAITED FOR CALL.

Then he telephoned to another member of the gang, a lawyer, who asked that everyone remain there until he arrived. He appeared in a short time, having been waiting at his office for the call.

They all talked the matter over and the victim's new counsel asked if it could not be settled. Finally the spokesman of the four who had broken in, said it could be fixed up if our host would make a settlement. He said all four of us were married and that it would be worth some money to my husband.

The victim was so horrified at the thought of publicity that he gave his check then and there for $15,000 to cover the entire party. Then the gang went out and we left immediately afterward.

It is probably unnecessary to say that that check was cashed as quickly as possible, for fear the victim might stop payment. The money was split as usual, but for my part I received only a small sum, although I had been promised a third. The other girl also received a small amount, the payments being made next day at the office of one of the lawyers.

TOLD OF FORGERY.

At that time I was told that the victim had paid only a small amount, but later learned the exact sum. I also found out that the hotel manager got the biggest part of the money.

In this case also I was told that my husband's name was forged to a release by the lawyer who was recommended by the hotel man. In no case did my husband's name appear.

MET A MYSTIC.

A few weeks later I was called to the office of one of the gang, and there met a mystic who had been used by them in a number of operations. He was a tall, fine looking man, with impressive personality, and I understand it was through him that the gang "took" a prominent girl for $100,000.

With him at the time was a young woman from whom he had obtained secrets of an affair which she was carrying on with a wealthy man. I was introduced to them as a very clever woman and the girl was told she could make plenty of money and be as prosperous as I was. In fact I was used as an example of what the girls might have if they would do as they were instructed, although as a matter of fact I had received little.

We were entertained lavishly by the gang for a few days and eventually the girl consented to do as they wanted, with the promise that she would not have to appear in court but would receive a share of the spoils.

Plans were laid to trap the man with whom she was intimate, and an apartment was obtained by one of the gang under the name he was being used by another woman. This was the girl who was with me on the day we started for Camp Devens and met my old lawyer friend. She was now the sweetheart of a prominent Boston physician.

The apartment I have referred to never was mine, although statements have been made to the contrary. It also was said that I had a number of apartments which were used for blackmail purposes, but that also was untrue.

STAGE WAS SET.

The woman who first met this, the latest victim, brought him to the apartment and induced him to go as did friends with whom she was to stay for a few days. She told him that it would be unwise for her to go for him to go there to call.

As it happened, of course through arrangements, he called when she was not there. A friendship sprang up between him and the other woman, which was what the gang had planned. Naturally he called again on the lady, and as it just happened, we were both there. Liquor was on hand as usual and was partaken of freely by all three. The stage was once more set.

In the next and last instalment Mrs. Duggan concludes the story of her connection with the blackmailers.

KITTY GORDON.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 27.—Kitty Gordon, beautiful English actress, is engaged despite the denial of Ralph Ranlet of the New York Stock Exchange, who she declares is the lucky man.

The marriage will take place just as soon as she obtains her divorce from her present husband, Captain Henry Beresford, of the British army. The actress reiterated her announcement of her coming marriage and explained how Ranlet came to deny it.

"I suppose Ralph thought I should have waited until I had my decree," she explained, showing a telegram from Ranlet, which read: "Have affirmed or denied nothing until I heard from you."

"I suppose the dear boy was so surprised to find that our carefully-guarded secret had leaked out to the public that he could only stammer out a vague denial when questioned about our engagement," said Miss Gordon.

SNOW STORM IN THE SOUTH MAY RACE HERE

Rain and Snow Falling in Middle Atlantic and Southern States

Boston may experience another severe snow storm late tonight or early tomorrow unless a storm raging in Southern States almost as far down as Florida drifts out to sea, according to weather reports. Rain and snow are falling in the Middle Atlantic and Southern States.

The Weather Bureau predicted more snow in sixteen States in the East and in the South down to the northern Alabama-Mississippi line. Virginia reported the heaviest fall in years. At Danville twelve inches were recorded, while at Lynchburg street car service was badly crippled and Richmond was experiencing a steady fall today.

In Georgia traffic was interrupted by sleet, while Savannah was practically isolated until late last night.

Florida faces "freezing temperatures," if the weather clears in the northern section, according to the Weather Bureau. Snow will probably fall tonight and Saturday in Southern New England, New York, the Middle Atlantic States, North and South Carolina and in the eastern sections of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Today temperatures throughout the country and Canada are generally higher than yesterday and only in New England and the St. Lawrence valley were zero temperatures recorded.

Northfield, Vt., reported the lowest at 24 below, the coldest in the country. In Boston the lowest recorded was 12 above at from 2 a. m. to 6 a. m.

AVALANCHE BLOCKS THE SIMPLON TUNNEL

Geneva, Jan. 27.—A huge avalanche fell yesterday evening at the Southern entrance of the historic Simplon Tunnel, covering the railroad for fifty yards to a depth of several yards. A train from Brieg passed through the tunnel only a few minutes previously.

LOUD FLOODED WITH MESSAGES OF CHEER

Acquitted as Slayer, Prepares to Go Back to Old Job

Clarence W. Loud was kept busy today answering the telephone. Scores of his friends and many persons whom he did not know called up his home in Melrose to congratulate him on his acquittal of the murder of Patrolman James A. Preston.

A large number of friends and neighbors called in person. They gave Loud a hearty handclasp and remained for a few minutes of chat with him and his family.

A number of autos were parked outside the Loud home and with men and women constantly entering and leaving the house it looked as though a party was in progress.

"I am feeling fine after my first night at home in so long a time," Loud told a reporter. "I am glad to be here. I want to forget the trial as soon as possible.

"My old job as a shoe salesman is still open to me. I want to get to work again as soon as possible. I will undoubtedly take up my old place in a short time.

"Certainly we will continue to live right here in this house. We have no intention of running away. We have been exonerated. Why should I go to some other neighborhood?"

Loud will return to his employment with the Atlas Shoe Company next Monday. He will return as if he had just been away on a selling trip. No special demonstration will be made on the occasion, and he will fill out a sample case and take up the threads of his business life which were broken when he was placed under arrest.

It was learned today the Atlas Shoe Company has stood by Loud and his family during the ten months that he was under charge of murder. Both financial and moral aid have been furnished the accused man. None of the officials of the company, nor any of his associates, believed him guilty of the murderer of Patrolman Preston will probably be run down.

With the acquittal of Loud the slayer of the young World War veteran on the night of April 15, 1921, ends the long list of unsolved crimes in Massachusetts.

Middlesex County officials expect to make no further attempt to solve the mystery. They have no new clews to work on. All their theories and evidence were exhausted in preparing the case that led to Loud's trial and acquittal.

"The crime was done in secret. No one saw the police officer slain," declared Judge John F. Brown in his charge to the jury. This feature so strengthens the element of mystery in the case that State and county officials now see no prospect of ever finding a solution.

LYNAM DENIES CHARGES; CASE GOES TO JURY

"I Never Stole From Government," Says Ex-Ensign Accused as Embezzler

"I never stole any money from the government," exclaimed former Ensign Joseph T. Lynam, testifying in his own behalf in Federal Court today before Judge Peters and a jury.

Lynam was charged with embezzling $21,000 of the funds of the U. S. S. Chester in March, 1921. The case went to the jury today.

Lynam admitted on the stand his story of how $13,842 was stolen from his cabin on March 21, 1921, while he was coming to Boston from Washington.

He said he put the money, which had been brought by him from the U. S. S. Pueblo, when he was transferred to the Chester, in a small valise and then put the coat under the pillow in his railroad berth. When he looked for the money later it was gone.

On reaching Boston, he said, the money was gone.

Then he testified that he telephoned to Captain Waite at the Charlestown Navy Yard and told him of the loss, how he made efforts to replace the money without avail, and later, panicstricken, he went to Montreal.

Asked regarding a check for $1,000 bearing the signature "C. L. Lynam," he admitted signing it, but said it was used in exchange for cash in government business.

L. G. Walling, acting supply officer of the Chester, testified that Lynam was in charge of clothing and other supplies on the ship and had charge of making up the payrolls.

REVERE MAN SENTENCED FOR GAS METER THEFTS

John S. Bruder, twenty-four years old, of Winthrop avenue, Revere, was given six months in the House of Correction today by Judge Barnes in the East Boston court after pleading guilty to five counts of larceny of $22.75 from gas meters in the town of Winthrop the property of the Suburban Gas and Electric Company. Bruder who represented himself a water inspector visited the homes of several of the residents and with a screw driver pried off the coin boxes on the gas meters, police assert.

HELD FOR ATTACK WITH GUN IN A POOLROOM

Thomas W. Watts, twenty-three years old, Dartmouth place, Peach End, charged with assault with intent to kill Ferdinand Owens, No. 127 Dartmouth street, was held in $500 for a hearing on February 3, in Municipal Court today. His arrest followed a shooting in a poolroom on Dartmouth street. Owens is in City Hospital with a bullet wound in each thigh.

Civic Worker Admires Woman Sheriff Who Will Hang Murderer

"Perfectly Splendid," Comments East Boston Woman, Praising Iowan's Spartan Purpose

By HAZEL CANNING.

It's just as dignified for a woman to hang a man, as for a woman to darn her husband's socks.

That is, provided the duties the woman has sworn to perform call upon her to hang an man.

So says Mrs. Fred L. Pigeon, Director of the East Boston High School Center. Mrs. Pigeon made this statement apropos of a news story from Waukon, Iowa. The dispatch said that Mrs. Gunda Martindale, woman sheriff, will be required by law to take the life of Earl Threet, on March 9. Mrs. Martindale is the first woman in history who has been required, by her legal duties, by the oath she swore when she entered office to deprive a man of life.

"WELL, WHY NOT?"

Mrs. Martindale, with dignity and calm purpose, says she will be ready so to do. And Mrs. Pigeon, civic worker, kindly wife and pillar of society, over in East Boston, came back with an admiring, "well, why not" I, for one, would be sorry if Mrs. Martindale failed in the performance of all her duty."

The story which led up to the grim duty so soon to be imposed upon Mrs. Martindale, is an heroic one, heroic at least so far as Mrs. Martindale is concerned. Earl Threet, the condemned man killed a country school teacher. The populace of the Iowa town became enraged, and tried to get Threet, to lynch him. Here Mrs. Martindale stepped in, a forceful goddess of justice.

"PERFECTLY SPLENDID."

"You shall not have him," she told the mob, and, single-handed, she rescued him. She then landed Threet safely in jail, where he awaited trial. Later he was condemned to be hanged on March 9. Mrs. Martindale must hang him.

"Perfectly splendid in this brave woman that she is to ask to be excused from such a dread duty," comments Mrs. Pigeon. "I think the country well may be proud to have grown one such determined daughter as Mrs. Martindale.

"Of course, I need not say that most any woman of us would pray to be excused from such a dreadful duty. But I, for one, if it fell to my lot, as it has to Mrs. Martindale's, would pray for strength to carry on.

"Mrs. Martindale, when she took office, swore she would do all the things which pertained to the office. If she shirked the feel that she could, she never should have offered herself as sheriff.

"There is no reason for her sidestepping. I admire her erect attitude. She is perfectly able to fill the position. She is splendid. She is worthy of praise."

MRS. FRED L. PIGEON,

BUST OF BRYCE TO BE PRESENTED TO U. S.

London, Jan. 27 (Hyt the Associated Press).—The Sulgrave Institution of Great Britain today announced it had commissioned Sir William Reid Dick, noted English sculptor, to execute a bust of the late Viscount Bryce, to be presented to the American people as a memorial of the distinguished ambassador to the United States. A cable message has been sent to President Harding offering the gift to the city of Washington.

AUTO DRIVER, UP FOR INTOXICATION, FINED $100

Tyler C. Potter, twenty-two years old, of Pleasant street, Brookline, was fined $100 in Newton Court today on a charge of driving an auto while under the influence of liquor. He was arrested by a policeman after he had driven his car onto the sidewalk in Newtonville.

38 MOTORISTS FINED BY CHARLESTOWN COURT

Thirty-eight autoists were arraigned in the Charlestown Court today and paid fines ranging from $4 to $25. Jeremiah McCarthy was charged with not slowing down and not giving a warning signal on Main street. The arresting officers testified he told them he "would get the case fixed." He was fined $25.

ARBUCKLE CASE TO DRAG INTO NEXT WEEK

Testimony of Dr. Shiels for Defence Opens Door for Long State Rebuttal

By International News Service.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Despite efforts to speed the case there seemed little probability as the defence drew to a close today, that the second trial of Roscoe C. "Fatty" Arbuckle for manslaughter would end before late next week.

Dr. George Franklin Shields, noted physician and surgeon, who was medical adviser to Attorney Delmas in the first trial of Harry K. Thaw, and who was summoned as an expert to testify in the Grover Cleveland Bergdoll case, was still under cross-examination when court convened today.

He had been announced as the defence's last witness, but issues arising in his testimony may necessitate other witnesses. Counsel hinted at a new medical contention in questions asked of the doctor and ruled out by the court.

Dr. Shields held that vomiting, immersion in cold bath or coughing might possibly have caused the condition which resulted in the death of Virginia Rappe.

His testimony followed two smashing blows of the defence when they succeeded in getting before the jury testimony of Dr. Olaf Kaarboe and Dr. M. E. Rumwell. Dr. Kaarboe said Miss Rappe should her head in the negative when he asked if she had been injured, while Dr. Rumwell said she ascribed her condition to drinking. The testimony was not permitted at the first trial.

District Attorney Brady said the State's rebuttal testimony would require at least two days. There will be no court Monday by an agreement to permit Gavin McNab to go to Nevada to argue the Mary Pickford divorce case.

DEADLOCK PAVES WAY FOR U. S. CARDINALS

Vatican Party Divided on Peace Policy Toward Italian Government

Rome, Jan. 27 (By the Associated Press).—With the body of the late Pope Benedict laid away beneath the flagstones of St. Peter's, the interest of the Sacred College and the Vatican household turned today to the election of his successor at the conclave called for February 2.

The question of a rapprochement between the Church and the Italian government forms into line the election. A thorough canvass of opinion in the Vatican shows that the peace party, or those advocating closer relations with the government, are virtually deadlocked with the irreconcilables, or those opposing a rapprochement, in the number of votes each faction can muster. A two-thirds majority is necessary for election.

Twenty-nine cardinals, headed by Cardinal Gasparri, the camerlengo or acting head of the Church, are known to favor continuance of Benedict's policy, which was understood to have been diverted toward a resumption of relations with the Quirinal; twenty members of the Sacred College are thought to be just as strongly opposed, while nine are classified as neutral.

The attitude of the American Cardinals—O'Connell of Boston and Dougherty of Philadelphia—is unknown at the Vatican, but the opinion is expressed that, unless a compromise is reached, never has there been such an opportunity for a foreign Cardinal to be elected Pope. The majority cajoled by the Italian members of the Sacred College is so evenly divided that Vatican officials admit all depends upon the attitude of the foreign Cardinals.

The name for Cardinal Maffi, Archbishop of Pisa, who was mentioned as favored by the government, appears not to be in decline, while Cardinal Gasparri and Cardinal Archpriest Merry Del Val, respectively leaders of the peace party and the irreconcilables, are acknowledged by their supporters to have little chance of being elected themselves.

The candidate of the Gasparri party is Cardinal Raffael Merry Del Val. Merry Del Val's faction, after voting for Cardinal Maffi on first ballot as a test of strength, it is understood will switch to Cardinal Laurenti, the lowest ranked member of the Sacred College stationed in Rome. Laurenti presided for many years over the Roman Catholic World Missions, and is well known to all the foreign cardinals.

Cardinal Van Rossum of Holland is most prominently mentioned as a neutral candidate should a deadlock be reached in the conclave. He is sixty-seven years old and was raised to the purple by Pius X. in 1911.

For the first time in history, women will be permitted to be present in the quarters occupied by the conclave. They are the Sisters of Charity who preside over the destinies of the cardinals' kitchens. Heretofore have been supervised by monks.

Denies Jesuits Seek to Name New Pope

New York, Jan. 27.—Very Rev. Joseph H. Rockwell, provincial of the Maryland-New York Province of the Society of Jesus, today asserted that the Jesuits would not attempt to influence the College of Cardinals in the election of the next Pope.

He made this assertion in a formal statement denying reports published in London and later printed in this country to the effect that the society was seeking to bring about elevation of a pro-German.

"In the first place, the Society of Jesus has no influence whatever in this matter, and in the second place it would not attempt any influence," read the statement.

EFFECT "SHAKEUP" AT SOMERVILLE CITY HALL

Mayor Webster of Somerville sent to the Aldermen today the names of but three city officials for reappointment, and reports of a contemplated "shakeup" at City Hall were renewed. Renominations made were those of Water Commissioner Frank E. Merrill, Sanitary Department Superintendent Fred T. Mayhew and City Solicitor Frank W. Kaan. The following nominations were made to fill vacancies: George C. Brayley, to be overseer of the poor; John Wilkinson and Benjamin Sweetser, to the City Planning Board, and Albert L. Haskell to the library trustees.

BURGLARS TAKE SAFE, BUT FLEE IN WINTHROP

Frightened Away as They Roll Strong Box With Cash From Thornton Station

Burglars, who had rolled a safe containing several hundred dollars from the Thornton station of the Narrow Gauge railroad on Winthrop street, Winthrop, to a marsh across the tracks, were frightened away today before they had time to attempt to open the safe.

Patrolman Walter George discovered the door of the station broken open. Drawing his gun, he made his way to the office, where he found the safe was missing. He telephoned to the police station and Patrolman Donovan came to help him.

The patrolmen followed marks on the floor and scratches on the ice outside the station to the nearby marshes, where the safe was found. A sledge hammer and two drills were lying beside the safe. The police think the arrival frightened the men away, just as they were about to try to open the safe.

The safe stands four feet high and it is thought there must have been at least four men on the gang to have moved it. Employes of the railroad were busy for some time today placing the safe back in the station.

Chief of Police McNeil of Winthrop asked the Boston police to send a finger print expert to study the marks on the safe.

ARMY TRANSPORT DIX GOES ASHORE IN HARBOR

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—The army transport Dix went ashore on Alcatraz Island in the harbor while being warped into her dock at Angel Island in a dense fog. The Dix had only a skeleton crew aboard.

DRUG PEDLAR IS SEIZED AT GUN POINT

"Connie the Rat" Captured in South End Following Sale to U. S. Officer

Cornelius J. Moriarty, known to the underworld as "Connie the Rat," and to Federal officers as one of the biggest drug pedlars in Boston, was arrested on Winchester street by members of the U. S. narcotic squad after a battle in which the officers were forced to march him to the station with drawn revolvers.

Moriarty was placed under arrest just after he had sold one-half ounce of morphine to Narcotic Inspector William E. Davis. As Davis showed him his badge and told him that he was under arrest, "The Rat" put up a struggle and called lustily for his "gang."

FIRES SHOT IN AIR.

Davis instantly drew his revolver and fired a shot in the air.

Narcotic Officers Ralph A. Fry, William P. Scannell and V. J. Voelker, who had concealed themselves nearby, leaped from their hiding places and rushed to Davis' assistance.

The officers soon had Moriarty subdued and prepared to take him to the Lagrange street station. A large crowd had gathered, hearing the shot and the prisoner's cries, and while no actual demonstration was made against the Federal men, the demeanor of the gathering was threatening.

Davis and the rest were obliged to draw their revolvers and display them menacingly before the crowd would make a way for them. On arrival at the station Moriarty was bailed out by friends in bonds of $3,000.

Moriarty was held in $2,000 bail for a hearing on Tuesday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes. He pleaded not guilty.

According to the officers, Moriarty has for six or seven years been conducting an extensive business in contraband drugs. He is said to have hundreds of customers, including a long list of girls and women of the South End, and is reported to have connections in Canada and the border states by means of which he secures his supplies of drugs.

The officials declared that Moriarty sold only in wholesale quantities, such as one-half or the ounce package, refusing entirely to sell to the "small fry," who buy a few grains at a time. He is said to conduct his business in an automobile, for the most part, and is also alleged to have become wealthy through his operations.

$20 FOR HALF OUNCE.

A week ago Davis stopped him and gave him $20 for a half-ounce of morphine. Obliged to go to his rooms at No. 38 Church street, South End, for the drug, the man is said to have left a 32-calibre revolver with Davis for security until his return. Davis did not arrest him at that time, waiting until the second sale before taking the man into custody.

In addition to his alleged drug selling activities, Moriarty is said by the police to be a bad gunman and a notorious pickpocket. He has served terms in the Concord Reformatory, it is alleged.

Nine Old Warships Sold by U. S. Navy to Junkmen

Washington, Jan. 27 (By International News Service).—The sale of nine old warships as junk was announced today by the Navy Department.

Eight of them were bought by Hilner & Sons, Philadelphia, for $235,000. They were the battleships Maine, Missouri and Wisconsin, the cruiser Columbia and the monitors Target, Tonopah, Ozark and Miantonomah.

The cruiser Memphis, now on the rocks off Santa Domingo, was bought by the Radetsky Iron & Metal Company of Denver for $3,000.

HUSBAND SAYS FOUR MEN GAVE HIM BEATING

Attack Follows Charge Made Against Victim's Wife Before Somerville Judge

Accused of taking Michael J. Costello from the home of his parents, No. 372 Medford street, Somerville, and forcing him to walk a mile and a half, bareheaded and in house slippers, four Worcester men were arraigned in Somerville Court today on the charge of assault and battery. Costello, although badly beaten, appeared against the men, as did members of his family.

Costello was before Judge Farrell in Somerville Court yesterday on the charge of non-support. He testified he had left his wife, Mrs. Costello's three brothers, Michael A., Peter J. and Anthony J. Copper, all of Worcester, and Frank Garbella, also of Worcester, were present at the trial.

Testimony was introduced at the trial today tending to show that the Worcester men forced an entry into the Medford avenue house last night and, after beating Costello, dragged him into the street. Costello testified they told him they were going to take him to a house on Somerville avenue where his wife lives, make him retract his statement that he had reason to believe she was unfaithful, and then take him to New York and ship him out of the country.

After they had left the police were called and a patrol wagon with three officers was hurried to the scene.

The police then instituted a search for the five men and found them nearly a half-hour later on Central street, between Avon and Berkeley streets.

Sailor Held in Theft From U. S. Waives Extradition

Harry C. Speck of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, under indictment in that State on the charge of stealing government property, was ordered removed to that jurisdiction by Federal Judge Peters of this district, following waiving of extradition by the prisoner.

Speck, who was quartermaster of the Shipping Board schooner Seattle Spirit, was taken into custody on board the vessel by Federal officials in Boston harbor, where the vessel had arrived from Santos, Brazil.

Federal officials stated that Speck is alleged to have stolen aeroplane motors, propellers and linen which were the property of the government. It is expected that within a few days U. S. Marshal Keville will delegate one of his deputies to take Speck back to Oklahoma.

SAYS CAMBRIDGE MAN THREATENED TO KILL HER

George A. King of Cambridge was arraigned in the Roxbury court today on a technical charge of assault on Mrs. Lillian A. Johnston of No. 429 Brookline avenue. Mrs. Johnston testified that he had been annoying her with his attentions for several months. When she threatened to tell her husband he showed her what she thought was a revolver wrapped in a handkerchief, she said, threatening to kill both her and her husband. Yesterday he telephoned that he was coming to see her, and she called the police. The police found the "revolver" to be a toy pistol. He was found guilty on the assault charge, which was continued for sentence.

CORCORAN ASKED $125,000 FOR SILENCE

Boss of "Blackmail Ring" Confessed When Pals Refused to Pay

ico. Friends of the lawyer in question reply that a relative of Corcoran was the first to mention Mexico. Wherever the suggestion came from, it was not carried out.

The shift from Jamaica Plain to Portchester was to have been the first leg in Corcoran's flight, but complications set in and now Corcoran is a star witness in the State.

If counsel for District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier had offered a defence before the Bill Summons Court Corcoran would have been put on by the State in rebuttal.

Corcoran was not gunning for Pelletier, however. The target of his fire was another Roxbury lawyer to wreak vengeance on whom "Big Bill," as he is known among his intimates, would almost be willing to serve a term himself.

The "straw that broke the camel's back" was the indictment returned against Corcoran at a special session of Suffolk County Grand Jury last December. This accuses him of complicity in the blackmailing of James L. Donovan, a Boston leather merchant, of $11,000, and of aiding a New Hampshire business man named Curtis for $15,000 in a Boston apartment.

When Corcoran returned from New York he found no hands outstretched to greet him. None or the familiar faces greeted him at the Court House. He had expected some sort of welcome and assurance of support. He expected that he would find it easy to raise his $10,000 bail among friends, but he was forced to appeal to two professional bondsmen.

After his arraignment in Suffolk Superior Court Corcoran was fined $100, according to his friends. It was then that the State camp profited. Despite the elaborate plans and rumored plans for Corcoran's alleged flight, it was a curious thing that Attorney-General Allen and his forces never appeared to worry about placing their hands on Corcoran when they wanted him.

They never feared his disappearance and they smiled when reports that he had fled to Mexico got into print. They knew better. Agents were reporting "Big Bill's" movements constantly and the growing breach was also known, so the attorney general and his assistants bided their time. It was whispered today, however, that they had not bargained on so frank a statement as Corcoran made.

Effective use will be made of this statement in the criminal proceedings soon to be instituted, it is said.

Indictments against Corcoran's alleged confederates, and others named as co-conspirators at the Pelletier trial, will not be sought until after grand jury inquiry into the wrecking of several trust companies in Boston has been completed.

Investigation of the affairs of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company was resumed today by Suffolk Grand Jury. This institution has been under scrutiny for the past three days. Officials, clerks, stenographers, depositors and others have been among the many witnesses called.

The Tremont Trust will be the next probed, and after that will come investigation of the Hanover Trust. The Grand Jury is expected to make a report of its findings in the Dolbeer case on Monday or Tuesday. It was hinted today that a partial report might be made public by Saturday, but that is doubtful.

Adjournment may be taken for a few days, but it is reported on good authority that the Suffolk Grand Jury will be busy for the next five or six weeks in special sittings in order to clear up the mass of criminal matters to be presented by the office of Attorney General Allen.

This means that the Attorney General's office has taken over the Grand Jury of Suffolk County to handle all of its major cases, just as it did for the first time last December when ten or twelve men and women, including Corcoran, were indicted on blackmail charges. And the Attorney General's representatives will remain in charge for some time to come.

Evidence in the bank cases is being presented by Assistant Attorney Generals Hurwitz and Goldberg.

The affairs of the Cosmopolitan are reported to be badly muddled. It was reported today that $3,000,000 of the funds of the Cosmopolitan have not been accounted for.

The faulty investments made and kindred matters are reported to be under scrutiny by the grand jurors. It was reported today that a cigar business in which the Cosmopolitan officials invested heavily proved a profitable enterprise, but that money was lost in other ventures, among them a chain of motion picture theatres in New England.

A firm of Italian importers got a loan of $150,000 to corner the entire olive field in California. Three thousand barrels of olives were placed in storage in Boston when prices were high, but they tumbled soon after and the deal proved a total loss. The health authorities of Boston seized the olive supply and placed a ban on any sales in Boston. Recently the olives were shipped by schooner to Canada.

CONVINCED JAIL GUARDS AID DRUG SALES

Coldwell Declares "Junkies" Serving Time at Atlanta Get All They Want

How "dope" is smuggled into a penitentiary, how addicts receive the "cold turkey" cure and how the problem of taking care of victims of narcotics is being neglected, was told today by Joseph M. Coldwell of Providence, one of the men who served with Debs at Atlanta Penitentiary for violating the Espionage Act.

"We have not kept pace with the drug problem: it is growing to alarming proportions, and the authorities in Massachusetts seem to be alive to the situation," he said.

CALLS SYSTEM WRONG.

"While I was at Atlanta, I came in contact with hundreds of drug addicts and 'dope' pedlars. The system of taking care of drug addicts is wrong.

"I believe they have a disease and should not be mixed with well men in a jail until they have recovered from their affliction. 'Dope' eventually takes from a person all conception of honesty.

"At Atlanta the other prisoners did not like to associate with them, because they would steal to get something to exchange for drugs.

"And the 'junkies,' as we called them, always managed to keep supplied with the stuff. I am convinced that there was connivance between guards and pedlars on the outside. The 'junk' was carried in by guards. The guards are very poorly paid and no wonder they succumbed to the temptation.

"A 'dope' pedlar, who ruins the lives of many persons, should meet just punishment. I had a 'dope' pedlar for a cellmate and he was always making trouble.

HUMANE TREATMENT.

"Drug addicts should be treated humanely and constantly under supervision. The treatment at Atlanta is to put them in the hospital, stop giving them any more drugs and treat them medicinally. This sudden withdrawal of 'dope' is called 'cold turkey.'

"After the 'junkie' has gotten off the stuff, he is turned loose with the rest of the prisoners. Then he runs into other 'junkies' and pretty soon he is taking 'dope' again."

U. S. REGULATION OF COAL MINES PROPOSED

Senator Kenyon Blames Both Operators and Miners for Recent Conflict

Washington, Jan. 27.—A government tribunal for regulation of the coal industry under a statutory code of industrial law enforced only by power of public opinion was recommended in a report presented to the Senate today by Chairman Kenyon of the Labor Committee which recently investigated disorder in the West Virginia-Kentucky coal fields.

The report held that both the coal operators and miners were responsible for the recent fatal conflicts and property destruction in West Virginia and said mutual concessions by the coal operators and United Mine Workers would have to be made to end the conflict.

"The issue is perfectly plain," said Senator Kenyon's report. "The operators in this particular section of West Virginia openly announced that they will not employ men belonging to the unions. And, further, that they have the right and will exercise it if they desire, to discharge a man if he belongs to the union. On the other hand, the United Mine Workers are determined to unionize these fields.

TO INTRODUCE BILL.

The proposal for a Federal coal tribunal and code of laws applying both to operators and miners was his personal suggestion, Senator Kenyon said.

Senator Kenyon announced that later he would introduce a bill covering his plan for the coal board and "code," which follows:

"1—Coal is a public utility, and in its production and distribution the public interest is predominant.

"2—Human standards should be the constraining influence in fixing the wages and working conditions of mine workers.

"3—Capital prudently and honestly invested in the coal industry should have an adequate return sufficient to stimulate and accelerate production.

"4—The right of operators and miners to organize is recognized and affirmed. This right shall not be denied, abridged, or interfered with in any manner whatsoever.

"5—The right of operators and of miners to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing is recognized and affirmed.

"6—The miners who are not members of a union have the right to work without being harassed by fellow workmen who may belong to unions. The men who belong to a union have the right to work without being harassed by operators who do not believe in unionism.

"7—The right of all unskilled or common laborers to earn an adequate living wage sufficient to maintain the worker and his family in health and reasonable comfort, and to afford an opportunity for savings against unemployment, old age, and other contingencies is hereby declared and affirmed.

EQUAL PAY FOR WOMEN.

"8—The right of women to engage in industrial occupations is recognized and affirmed; their rates of pay shall be the same as those of male workers for the same or equivalent service performed. For women are engaged in any way in mining, but it may be as well to announce this proposition as to pass it by.

"9—Children under the age of 16 years shall not be employed in the industry unless permits have been issued with State authority.

"10—Six days shall be the standard work week in the industry with one day's rest in seven. The standard work day shall not exceed eight hours a day.

"11—Punitive overtime shall be paid for hours worked each day in excess of the standard work day.

"12—When a dispute or controversy arises between operators and miners, workers there should be no strike or lockout, pending a conference or a hearing and determination of the facts and principles involved."

JURY ACQUITS SCHWARTZ IN GEM THEFT

Pittsfield Jeweler Cheered as Sealed Verdict Is Read in "Throne Room" Case

Pittsfield, Jan. 27.—Philip E. Schwartz was acquitted today by a jury in Superior Court of the charge of stealing $137,000 worth of diamonds from a salesman.

The trial lasted six days and the jury's verdict reached last night was sealed into court today sealed.

The popularity of the verdict was evidenced by the cheering in the court room when it was announced. For two minutes court officers were unable to restore order. Schwartz's wife, father and mother were in court and they all embraced him when the verdict was announced.

Scores of friends pressed forward to greet Schwartz as he walked forth a free man and his progress to his home was in the nature of an ovation.

Getting Rid of a Stubborn Cough is Childs Play Now

Make the Medicine Yourself at Home It's Cheap—But You Can't Beat It.

If you want to take part of that bad, hang on cough and do it in a few hours, better get one ounce of Parmint (double strength) and mix a half pint at home.

You can do this in two minutes by adding a little sugar and enough water to fill a half pint bottle.

You'll travel the world over before you get a medicine that will act so surely and quickly on the mucous membrane of the nose and throat. It halts the inflammation, the tickling sensation stops with the first spoonful, the heavy breathing goes and clean membrane, free from irritation and mucus follows.

For catarrhal conditions such as nausea, sinus drainage, sogged nostrils, weary eyes, it won't disappoint—ask for Parmint (double strength). Speak plainly so that the druggist will know exactly what you want.—Advertisement.

WIFE ADMITTED SHOOTING, SAY WITNESSES

Mrs. Rosier Clasps Baby as Slaying of Husband and Typist Is Described

By Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Catherine Rosier sat in the Coroner's Court today and listened attentively while witnesses told of finding her husband, Oscar Rosier, and his stenographer, Mildred Gemidine Reckitt, after she had shot them in his office last Saturday.

Clad in deep mourning and clasping her three-months-old baby, Richard, to her breast, she followed the testimony with an occasional show of emotion, at which times she was comforted by her mother. The infant son found solace in a nursing bottle.

Several witnesses testified Mrs. Rosier admitted the shooting. William Miller testified he saw Mrs. Rosier running along the second floor of the office building screaming, "I did it. I had to do it. I'm jealous." Another witness said she hysterically screamed she was intoxicated when she fired the shots.

Paul Gottlieb, a newspaper reporter, testified he heard Mrs. Rosier say "I was intoxicated. When I was in Hahnemann Hospital when my baby was born, they were running around together. This afternoon I came here and caught them."

Several times the district attorney's office attempted to end the inquest before the Grand Jury.

Fight Warrants for Hotel Arrests in Potter Raid

Application for warrants for the arrest of Con and Daniel Keefe, proprietors of Keefe Bros.' Hotel on Dartmouth street, where Prohibition Director Elmer C. Potter's men seized $200,000 worth of liquors, was bitterly opposed by counsel for the Keefes, who appeared today before United States Commissioner Hayes at the Federal Building.

Elihu D. Stone, assistant Federal District Attorney, appeared to ask for the warrant, charging illegal possession. Attorney Daniel A. Shea demanded a hearing to determine on what grounds a warrant was issued for a search at the hotel. He declared the amount of liquor seized was greater than that mentioned in the warrant and that the warrant was in other respects illegal.

Commissioner Hayes set Monday as a date for a hearing on this point, as it is expected that by that time a return of the warrant will be made by the prohibition officials.

on the ground that sufficient evidence had been adduced to hold the accused woman and that it was unnecessary to parade all the details before the public gaze at this time. The coroner, however, insisted on hearing all witnesses, to the apparent satisfaction to counsel for the defense.

JAZELEY GIVES WARNING ON 'MAD DOGS'

Situation Is Serious All Over State, the Commissioner Tells Sportsmen

A warning concerning the spread of rabies among dogs was issued today by William A. L. Bazeley, commissioner of conservation, at a conference of sportsmen from all parts of the State.

"A very serious situation has come about all over the State," said Commissioner Bazeley, "because of the great increase in the number of 'mad' dogs. The situation has become so serious that this week the officials charged with the responsibility held a meeting, and the local authorities have been urged to be sure that the dog officers are on the job and all unlicensed dogs and uncollared dogs picked up and disposed of. We have sent word to the animal inspectors in the various cities and towns, warning them of the conditions.

"We have kept quiet about it up to now because we did not want to alarm the community, but the conditions have been getting worse and worse for several months.

"We have been expecting it," he continued, "because Connecticut last year had more than 3,000 cases. We have been looking for trouble to reach us here and now we have got it.

"There is no question that in the near future there may be a necessity in certain communities for ordering that dogs be kept tied up."

PARIS, France.

THE sports coat arriving most recently from the hand of Premet brings with it a pleated skirt to match. There is really nothing to distinguish the costume from a sports tailleur except the exceeding length of the coat, which is cut on full kimono lines. Narrow cire braid edges the pockets and extends across the back of the coat, simulating a waist-line; the collar is also braided. The fabric used is a coarsely woven woolen material in beige, and the braid is rust brown. Yellows and browns and variations of these colors are especially smart just now, the lighter tones for the hours of skiing at Saint Moritz or the warm and more leisurely days at the Riviera, the darker shades for the equally eventful lives of those who linger in Paris.

THERE is a certain type of tailleur one likes to think of as being particularly fascinating to the Parisienne, and to that type belongs the three-piece model sketched at the right. It is developed in stone gray velours de laine, with its collared Eton jacket trimmed in steel braid and fastened with fat little steel buttons. The long-sleeved blouse worn beneath the short-sleeved jacket is of gray velvet beaded in steel, and this fabric continues in a strip, also beaded, down the side of the straight, slightly gathered skirt. This ingenious touch removes all trace of severity and substitutes charm in its stead.

PHELAN REPLIES TO ATTACK ON MEMORIAL

Declares Testimonial to Henry B. Endicott Was Ordered by Legislature

James J. Phelan, assistant during the war to the late Henry B. Endicott, food administrator and executive manager of the Public Safety Committee, today wrote to the Committee on State House taking exception to the statement of Senator John P. Englert of Boston, made at a recent legislative hearing, that "it is wrong that rich families should be permitted to erect memorials in the State House while the deeds of some poor private soldiers are forgotten."

Stating that the Endicott Memorial was placed in the Capitol at the direction of the people themselves, Phelan expressed the opinion that "in justice to the patriotic and unselfish citizen who has passed on" this fact ought to be made plain. In his letter, he says that the Legislature of the year 1920 appropriated the sum of $400 for the erection in the State House of a suitable memorial to Henry B. Endicott.

"It was subsequently discovered that the sum of $400 was inadequate for this purpose," Phelan declared. "Therefore, some of the citizens of Massachusetts and friends and admirers of Henry B. Endicott and his work, having ascertain that there would be no objection to private contributions being raised in addition to the $400 appropriated by the State, raised the sum of about $2,500 that a suitable memorial might be erected, there being fifty-three contributors to which fund no member of the Endicott family or any other contributor, donated more than $50."

Phelan was treasurer of the supplementary fund.

ISSUE WARRANT FOR ARREST OF TOWNLEY

To Be Served on Accused Embezzler at Close of Jail Term as Spy

By Associated Press.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 27.—A warrant has been issued here for the arrest of A. C. Townley, president of the National Non-Partisan League, charging him with implication in the alleged embezzlement of $3,000 from the Scandinavian-American Bank of Fargo.

The warrant, which was issued in the Cass County District Court, will be served on Townley when he is released next week from the Jackson, Minn., jail, where he is serving a ninety-day sentence for conviction on a charge of violating the State espionage law.

TAKE PLASTER CAST FROM BROKEN NECK

New York, Jan. 27.—The plaster cast in which Harry Herbert has been confined since he broke his neck November 12, while playing quarterback for Syracuse University against Colgate, was removed today at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

It was said that superficial examination indicated healing of the break, but that the youth's condition will not be learned definitely until an X-ray is taken.

STATE HOUSE NOTES

William C. Adams, director of the division of fisheries and game in the Department of Conservation, today outlined the program of regulation proposed by the division. The chief measures are: To allow the Governor to proclaim temporary closed seasons on fish and game when emergencies arise; To permit the issuance of hunting licenses to minors of any age, provided they hunt in company with an adult; To allow the possession of fish and game legally killed in Massachusetts for a reasonable length of time after the season closes, and to permit the importation of live hares and rabbits for liberating purposes at any time of the year.

The Committee on Ways and Means today reported a bill for a special commission to consist of the chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission and the director of the Department of Conservation, the director of Public Welfare, the State commander of the American Legion, and the chairman of the Massachusetts Commission to take necessary steps to clear fallen trees and broken limbs in the woods of the metropolitan parks. There is an appropriation of $50,000.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD OFFICIAL SAYS 'LET'S GO!'

Vice-Chairman Butler at Chamber Meeting Has Hopeful View for Nation

Railway managements and their employes have a moral obligation to avoid interruption of traffic and the United States Railroad Labor Board is endeavoring to lead both carriers and rail workers to carry out this obligation, Ben W. Hooper, vice-chairman of the labor board, declared today before the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Hooper, G. W. W. Hanger, public member, and W. L. McMenigan, labor member of the board, were guests of the chamber at a luncheon, where Mr. Hooper voiced the opinion that America had passed through "the Winter of our discontent," and was now "standing on tiptoe, with the slogan of the vernacular on her lips, 'Let's go!'"

"The hard pull is over," the former Governor of Tennessee said. "The farmer is the only man in the country who has really deflated. He alone did not have the parachute of organization to retard his descent and break his fall. The next time this country takes an international joyride in the Zeppelin of war, the farmer will have his parachute along with him and will not be invited to step out on a storm cloud and slide down on a rainbow."

Mr. Hooper said he expected the number of railway employes to be largely increased in the Spring, that revenues would be enlarged by increased business and that conditions would probably justify a reduction of rates "which is so essential to the restoration of normal business."

In return to normal, Governor Hooper said, the railroads had accomplished the transition without any general strike or serious disturbance.

CHAMPION PIGEON IS DEAD IN ENGLAND

Derby, Eng., Jan. 27.—"King of Rome," the world's champion pigeon, has just died here. In 1913 the bird won the world's longest pigeon race, from Rome to Derby, a distance of roughly 1,000 miles.

POLICE ARREST MOTORMAN ON HIS CAR

Charged With Drunkenness After Wild Ride of Quarter Mile in South End

Percy B. French, motorman on the Boston Elevated, of No. 1233 Columbus avenue, was arraigned in Roxbury Court today charged with drunkenness, following his arrest on his car last night, after driving at reckless speed from Tremont and Northampton streets to Washington and Northampton streets, the distance of a quarter of a mile.

Patrolman James Hall of the Roxbury Crossing station boarded the car at Tremont and Northampton streets and noticed that it made unusual speed in crossing Tremont, and that later, when it reached Shawmut avenue, it maintained that speed and narrowly missed a number of women.

At Wash ngton street, Wiom to speed remained unabated, a Boston Elevated inspector on the car called Hall and together they made their way to the vestibule and ordered French to stop the car. He obeyed at once.

Later when Hall was taking the names of some witnesses to the affair, French attempted to start the car again, but the inspector threw off the overhead switch and balked him.

With the help of Patrolman George Oliver, a colored policeman attached to the Mattapan station, Hall removed French from the car. On the way to a patrol box a crowd gathered and shouts of "Turn him loose," "Let him go," were uttered, but no attempt was made to interfere with the officers.

"Statements that the motorman put up a fight when we arrested him are incorrect," said the arresting officers today. "He merely dragged his legs and refused to help us get off the car, but he made no resistance."

HOUSE IN SWANSEA DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fall River, Jan. 27.—The two-story residence of Benjamin S. Chase, Bark street, Swansea, was destroyed by fire when the roof became ablaze from sparks which flew from the chimney. The damage, which is estimated at $1,000, is partially covered by insurance.

Dolls Five Feet Long For Adults Latest Craze in Paris

By The Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 27.—Dolls for grown-ups, dolls that are from three to five feet in length, that bang limp, with trailing limbs, are the latest craze in fashionable Paris.

A favorite is a pale-faced Pierrot, with wide-staring eyes, and bright red, bow-shaped lips. He is placed in the corner of a settee and his white face and black silk costume produce quite an artistic effect.

A QUESTION OF COLOR

Some persons have a mistaken notion regarding the color of tea. Color has nothing to do with tea quality, either in the leaves or in the brew.

But color is important when it comes to selecting a tea by the label. There's Yellow, for instance. LIPTON'S finest tea—the finest of the world's finest—is Lipton's Yellow Label brand.

The reason LIPTON'S Tea has the largest sale in the world is not because Lipton grows more tea than other tea planters—nor because of the color of the label—but because Lipton grows better tea.

Ask your grocer for LIPTON'S Yellow Label Tea. If he does not sell it, send us his name and address and we will mail you a FREE sample and give you the name of a grocer who can supply you. Address Thomas J. Lipton, Inc., Hoboken, N. J.

TWO HELD FOR BREAK IN WATERTOWN SHOP

Robert E. Wilson, 23 years old, and Edward M. Holian, 26 years old, of Arlington, were arraigned in Waltham Court today charged with breaking and entering the Hood Auto Tire Sales Company store on Mt. Auburn street, Watertown. A Watertown man discovered two men breaking in the door of the store and telephoned the police. An auto was standing near by. When the police arrived, the auto was gone, but the man had taken its number. The car was traced to Arlington and the men arrested.

The Hood Company reported that $60 worth of tires had been stolen.

ROXBURY MAN DIES AFTER OPERATION

John V. McNulty, twenty-four years old, of No. 3 Elmwood place, Roxbury, died at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary following a serious operation from which he failed to rally. He is survived by a widowed mother, Mrs. Mary A. McNulty, a sister, Mrs. J. Paul Canty, and two brothers, Michael J. and William P. McNulty, both of Roxbury. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon.

McNulty was well known among the younger set in Roxbury. He was at the time of his death financial secretary of the Shawmut Club.

ECONOMIC CLUB HEARS PUBLISHERS TALK

Worcester, Jan. 27.—McGregor Jenkins, publisher of the Atlantic Monthly Magazine, and Don C. Seitz, business manager of the New York World spoke on the "Making a Magazine and the "Making of a Newspaper," respectively at the second Winter meeting of the Economic Club at the Bancroft Hotel. Jenkins denied that the magazines ignore young writers and declared that every editor is constantly on the alert for new names and new talent.

BOY BANDITS HOLD UP AGED STOREKEEPER

Fall River, Jan. 27.—Bernard Silevitch, owner of a store on Union street and sexton of the Pearl street Synagogue, was held up by two boys armed with revolvers while he was alone in his store.

The boys forced the aged storekeeper to the rear of the shop and threatened him with bodily harm if he made any outcry. Then they rifled the cash drawer, but secured a little more than one dollar. They escaped.

'LITTLE MOTHER' TRIES TO END LIFE BY GAS

Nutley, N. J., Jan. 27.—The only way she could see of escaping the 'drudgery' of being a little mother to her three younger brothers and sister was suicide, Mary McNally, a fifteen-year-old High School girl, explained in a hospital to which she was taken suffering from gas poisoning. So she turned on the gas in her room and lay down on her bed to die. Neighbors smelled the gas in time, to save her life. Mary's mother died three years ago.

New-Day Milk

Double-Rich—Germless—Economical

We bring you milk now in the new-day way, and the highest grade of milk. It comes from high-bred cows, from sanitary dairies. It is guarded at every turn. It comes to you like cream. For drinking or for cooking you reduce it as you wish. It is utterly germ-free.

No Shortage—No Waste

Milk of this grade, under our plan, costs you less than bottled milk.

There are small cans and large cans. You open little or much as you want it, and you save all waste.

It supplies you milk and serves as a cream. It is of a super-grade. And you never need to guess on your wants.

Supreme Quality

This Van Camp Milk comes from high-bred cows. They are kept in sanitary dairies that are regularly inspected.

Close to each dairy we have a model condensery. There the fresh milk is placed in a vacuum. Then we apply a low heat until half of the water evaporates. This for economy in shipping.

The milk thus becomes as thick as thick cream. It is then sealed, then sterilized.

Use it as it comes for your coffee. Dilute it somewhat for your cereals. Add an equal part water—the water we evaporate—and you have a rich milk for drinking or for cooking.

You are never forced to skimmed milk, even for cooking. You always have the full butter fat.

We have spent 20 years in perfecting facilities to bring you such milk as this. Until you get it you are missing the finest milk produced.

TWO BULLETS FIRED IN POOLROOM ROW

Thomas W. Watts was arrested by officers of the East Dedham street station charged with assault with a loaded revolver with intent to commit murder, after police say, he had fired two shots at Fred Owens, thirty years old, in a pool-room at No. 115 Dartmouth street, wounding Owens twice in the thighs. Owens is at the City Hospital, with a bullet wound in each leg, while Watts is being held for a court appearance today.

TRUCK DRIVER HELD FOR WOMAN'S DEATH

Charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Rose Swerdlova, fifty-three years old, of No. 9 Elbert street, Roxbury, James Moran, a truck driver for the Columbia Poultry Company, was arraigned in Roxbury Court today. Mrs. Swerdlova died Wednesday night and investigation revealed the fact that she had been struck by an auto truck, while on Humboldt avenue. The police say Moran failed to make any report of the accident.

Genuine "California Fig Syrup" has directions for babies and children printed on the bottle. Say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

EXPOSES BOSCH BUYER AS EX-CONVICT

Identified by Governor Edwards of New Jersey by Rogues' Gallery Picture

New York, Jan. 27.—Martin E. Kern, president of the Penn Counties Trust Company at Allentown, Pa., who purchased the Bosch Magneto Company from A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, in 1919, has been positively identified as Edward Kern, forger, thief and ex-convict, by Governor Edward L. Edwards of New Jersey, according to an exclusive story in the New York American today.

Governor Edwards, upon seeing a Rogues' Gallery picture of the forger and confidence man Edward Kern, positively identified it as a picture of Martin E. Kern.

Former Representative Marshal Van Winkle of New Jersey also made a positive identification of the photograph. Van Winkle is counsel for the First National Bank of Jersey City of which Kent is president.

When shown Rogues' Gallery Photograph No. 3347, Governor Edwards said:

"Why, this is Kern, president of the Penn Counties Trust Company of Allentown. You don't mean to tell me he was in the Rogues' Gallery at the time of the transaction? I remember him very well. This full-face picture of his is perfect."

Van Winkle said:

"That profile view in the Rogues' Gallery picture is perfect—its a wonderful picture of Kern. I can not be mistaken."

HIS BROTHER.

Yet another development of the New York American's campaign to tear the veil from the purchase of the Bosch Magneto Company came to light today.

Kent owns a paper in Allentown, known as the Chronicle and News. In that publication is printed a statement in which it is asserted that the attacks against Kern followed an attempt to blackmail him, and that "Dr. Edward E. Kern mentioned in the New York American and other papers was unfortunately a brother of Martin E. Kern, president of the Penn Counties Trust Company.

"Edward E. Kern was an elder brother, who had been virtually disowned by the family because of his record several years ago. A friend of Mr. Kern's upon seeing a picture of Edward Kern printed in the New York American, immediately recognized it as that of Martin E. Kern's brother."

But—and replying to this assertion —the New York American has unearthed information given by Martin E. Kern in applying for insurance in the Mutual Life Insurance Company on December 13, 1908.

In that application he declared flatly that he had "no brothers, living or dead, and no sisters living or dead."

In that same application Kern said he was born in Germany on October 6, 1871, and that he was a "citizen of the United States." At that time he weighed 152 pounds and was five feet six and one-half inches tall, and "looked healthy."

DISPUTE 100 P. C. CLAIM.

He claimed that he obtained his American citizenship automatically at the time of the naturalization of his father, but the New York American investigation shows that at the time of his father's naturalization Kern was long past the age when he automatically assumed the citizenship of his parent.

These facts dispose of Kern's claim to be "100 per cent. American," and it is believed here that when the courts came to investigate the sale of the Bosch Magneto Company it would be declared invalid as violating that clause of the alien enemy property act which provides that the purchaser or purchasers of enemy property must be 100 per cent American.

Still another important fact brought out by the New York American is the recommendation by Francis P. Garvan, chief of the Bureau of Investigation under A. Mitchell Palmer, then Custodian of Alien Enemy Property, that the Bosch company be sold to Kern. Garvan said he had "officially investigated" and O. K.'d Kern and urged the sale of the Bosch company to him. That recommendation later was approved by Palmer.

But the amazing disclosures made in the New York American today deal with the career of the man Kern himself.

CONTROLS STOCK.

In 1869 he was arrested on a charge of forgery, while passing under the alias of Emil Brown. Later he served two terms in Sing Sing and one in Auburn prison. It was in 1905, after his release from Auburn prison that he blossomed out with these particularities and niceties of dress that have since distinguished him.

In the years that have passed since he left Auburn he has become president of a bank, head of a trust company, member of the exclusive Union League Club of Philadelphia, of golf and country clubs near Allentown, proprietor of a daily newspaper, owner of a brewery and associate of men of national importance.

And add to all this that through the kindness and generosity of A. Mitchell Palmer, former attorney-general, Kent is now the exclusive owner of the capital stock in the great Bosch Magneto Company, a $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 concern, making approximately 85 per cent. of the magnetos used in the United States.

MORE POWER LIKELY FOR UTILITIES BOARD

The legislative Committee on Judiciary, it is understood, will report favorably on the bill giving more power to the Public Utilities Commission. The commission at present lacks authority to summon witnesses and demand books and papers of corporations at hearings.

This lack of authority, it is claimed by Grenville S. MacFarland, who is conducting the fight for lower rates against the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, in co-operation with Arthur D. Hill, corporation counsel for Boston, has saved the corporation from being investigated as thoroughly as it should be.

The bill which the committee will report, it is said, will recommend that the commission be given the power of a court over witnesses and data.

700 DARTMOUTH 'GRADS' GREET HOPKINS

"College Education Not a Right but Privilege," Says President at Banquet

"College education is not the right of every boy, but a privilege which ought to be awarded to the most worthy," President Ernest M. Hopkins told 700 graduates at the annual dinner of the Dartmouth Alumni Association at Symphony Hall.

He explained the new admission plan, due to the rapid growth of the college. He said young men were now taken in partly on the basis of priority, partly on the basis of scholarship and partly by a geographical system.

"Dartmouth," he said, "is looking for boys qualified for leadership. By studying reports on the character and general standing of the candidates it is hoped to pick the men best qualified, but not necessarily of the best scholarship."

The alumni dropped all titles at the dinner. It was not Governor Cox, but "Chan" Cox, Dartmouth, '91, and "Al" Brown, '78, generally known as the Governor of New Hampshire. James R. Chandler presided. Harry S. McDevitt, '97, led in the singing of "Men of Dartmouth."

Samuel L. Powers, '74, gave reminiscences of famous Dartmouth graduates. He said he had talked with one or more members of every class that had graduated from Dartmouth in 103 years.

There were violin solos by Charles Wallis Ross, wife of Wallis Ross, '09, E. Griffith, '15, accompanied by Mrs. and songs by Gordon H. Beattie, '21.

STOMACH TROUBLE

In five minutes "Pape's Diapepsin" ends

Indigestion	Gases	Acidity
Sourness	Flatulence	Palpitation

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" now! In five minutes your stomach feels fine. Don't bother what upset your stomach or which portion of the food did the damage. If your stomach is sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; you belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear. If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only sixty cents for a large case at drug stores.—Advertisement.

IRISH CONGRESS TO VOTE ON RESOLUTION

Fight Expected on Move to Pledge Delegates to Complete Independence

By Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 27.—The world congress of the Irish race began the last day of its meeting today with discussion of a resolution putting the delegates on record as declaring that negotiations of the Anglo-Irish treaty was a denial of self-determination for Ireland.

The resolution pledges the delegates to use every means in their power to obtain complete independence for Ireland.

The resolution is regarded as merely making more specific the terms of the Irish independence resolution adopted Wednesday declaring one of the objects of the newly-created International Irish League was to secure for Ireland her rightful place among the free nations of the earth.

The new resolution was expected to come to a vote this afternoon when it was expected the congress would complete the details of the organization of the International Irish League and then adjourn.

6 CHILDREN END TWO-WEEK HIKE OVER SNOW

Left Orphans by Death of Both Parents in Frozen North, They Reach Railroad

By Associated Press.

Fort William, Ont., Jan. 27.—Six Indian children, who left the frozen bodies of their father and mother in the northern trapping wilderness, today reached Watcomb on the Canadian Government railway after a fortnight of mushing over the snow. The five young children, ranging upward from a baby of a few months, were brought back by their fourteen-year-old brother and a neighbor.

Their father, Atchimo Nan Tuchee, trapper, and their mother, both died of influenza in the family's woodland hut on Friday, January 13. That day the father called Atchimo, the oldest boy to his bedside, told him the end was near, gave him $1,200 and bade him care for his brothers and sisters.

Unable to bury the bodies, Atchimo left them in the shack with the five other children while he set out on snow shoes to fetch the nearest neighbor, thirty miles away. Two days later Atchimo came back with the neighbor. The five hungry tots were chewing raw moose flesh for nourishment. They had burned most of the furniture to keep from freezing. The bodies of their parents were frozen stiff.

The younger children were packed on a dog sled and started on the long rush to Watcomb, where they were fed and given medical aid. It is feared the little baby will die.

WELLESLEY TO HOLD WINTER CARNIVAL

Outing Club of College Is Arranging Event for February 11 or 25

The Outing Club of Wellesley College has elected as its chairman Elizabeth Parsons, 1922, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Miss Parsons is also secretary - president of the Athletic Association of the college. The Outing Club is the organization which supervises all outdoor sports not managed by the Athletic Association.

ELIZABETH PARSONS

These sports are Winter sports—skating, skiing, tobogganing, snowshoeing and among other sports—swimming and hiking.

The annual Winter carnival at Wellesley, which will be held either February 11 or 25, will be managed by the Outing Club. Miss Parsons was chairman of the 1920 Field Day and of the 1921 carnival, so it is expected that under her leadership this will be the most successful carnival ever held.

The skating carnival will be held as soon as it is possible to clear a sufficient amount of the ice on the lake. For the event as well as the Winter carnival, a band from Boston will furnish music and "hot dogs" and coffee will be sold.

DECLARES BIBLE FORBADE HIM TO QUIT WIFE

Peabody Man's Strange Plea Wins Probation for Erring Woman

Salem, Jan. 27.—Although admitting to Judge Cox in the Superior Court that his wife Anna was not on her good behavior, George Pascal of Peabody declared that he continued to live with her because "his Bible forbade him to leave her."

Anna had entered a plea of guilty to a statutory charge at the previous term of court, and the husband declared she was still unfaithful to her marriage vows.

Judge Cox asked to be shown the passage in the Bible denying the husband the right to leave his wife, and the Peabody man produced a Bible from his pocket and after turning to the passage handed it to the court.

But the Bible was printed in a foreign language and there were no interpreters in the court room, so a ruling in that direction was out of the question.

Further questioning by the court brought forth the information that the passage in question was to be found in both the old and new testaments, and that in substance it directed the husband to stand by his wife and endeavor to have her do what was right. The wife was placed on probation.

An attractive feature of the affair is the chafing dish luncheon which will be served from noon until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Prospective patrons are assured of a delectable meal, for the capable Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell is in charge, and the young society girls who have consented to serve at the luncheon will be marshalled under the headwaitership of the Misses Rose Fessenden of Chestnut Hill and Cornelia Fiske of Commonwealth avenue.

Of the girls who will wield their trays this noon are the Misses Louise Fessenden, sister of Rose Fessenden; Miss Marion Emmons, sister of the Hamilton Emmonses, recently of England; Lois Ka Weld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Winsor Weld of Chestnut Hill; Nell White, Marion and Florence Fenno, daughters of Mrs. L. Carteret Fenno of Beacon street; Miss Helen Scott, daughter of the Hugh D. Scott of Wellesley; Peggy Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allen Porter of Beacon street; Eleanor Winslow and Eleanor Sutton and Miss Mary Hallowell, daughter of the Mr. Penrose Hallowells of Readville. Of this group the majority are debutantes, and several of the latter rank among the most widely feted buds of the season. The buds, by the way, have been more than generous in offering their services as waitresses and saleslaides at charity functions and many of the matrons in charge of these affairs may be grateful for their aid.

Beside the luncheon there will be various tables heaped with the most tempting of foods to beguile the passing patrons, and the "saleslaides" at these tables will all be drawn from the ranks of the smart set. There will be on sale breads, cakes, doughnuts, preserves, delicatessen and candy.

Not a few people are looking forward to the chance to purchase from the flower table, in charge of Mrs. Robert Winsor of Weston, for a varied and beautiful display from the private greenhouses of Mrs. Winsor's many friends is assured.

Boston was well represented at the important dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bugbee gave at the Capital in honor of Chief Justice and Mrs. William Howard Taft. Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson of Washington and Brookline were there, as were also Mr. and Mrs. Walter Denegre, who divide their time between their Massachusetts North Shore estate in Manchester, their beautiful residence in New Orleans, La., and their home in the capital. All Boston society recalls the wedding of their daughter, Miss Elaine Denegre, and William D. Sohier, Jr., of Boston. The affair, which took place at the Denegre estate on the North Shore, was distinctly one of the most exclusive of the many important nuptial affairs which were solemnized last Summer at the Shore. The young couple, after spending a part of the Fall and Winter in New Orleans, are now sojourning for a while at Palm Beach, where they have entertained a number of times since their arrival.

Also at the dinner in honor of the Tafts were Prince and Princess Cantacuzene-Speransky, whose son, young Prince Michael, married Clarissa Curtis of Boston last Summer at Nahant, the Summer home of the bride's parents. Of course, the Prince's mother and father were both there at the wedding and both were acclaimed most charming by the host of wedding guests.

Still others in the dinner company were the Polish Minister and Princess Lubomirski, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glober, Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Gist Blair, Miss Josephine Patten, Constantin Brun, Minister of Denmark, and Jonkheer W. H. de Beaufort, charge d'affaires of the Netherlands.

Apropos of the Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Harding has accepted the invitation of the Princess and other members of the American Central Committee for Russian Relief to attend the exhibition of the handiwork of Russian refugees at No. 522 Seventeenth street tomorrow afternoon.

On the reception committee with Princess Cantacuzene are Mrs. Robert Wood Bliss, Mrs. Robert Lansing, Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. W. B. Graham and Miss Mary Sheridan.

PART OF ESTATE OF SEARLES TO BE SOLD

Atty. J. J. Sullivan of Lawrence Said to Have Reached Agreement With Executor

Lawrence, Jan. 27.—James J. Sullivan, a local lawyer, is negotiating with Arthur T. Walker of New York, executor of the estate of the late Edward T. Searles of Methuen, for the purchase of a large part of the estate known as "Stillwater." An agreement has been practically reached and it is expected that the transfer will be made in a short time.

The property, consisting of about 700 acres of land and several buildings, is said to be worth several hundred thousands of dollars. It runs from Maple street, Salem, N. H., to Pleasant street, Methuen, including all property, save fifty acres of land in that vicinity. The fifty acres, known as the Crow Nest estate, may be purchased by the owners of the Merrimack Valley Country and Golf Club for enlargement of the club.

It is also reported that Attorney Sullivan is to purchase about 200,000 square feet of land from the Searles estate, the property being south of Arlington street and west of Berkeley street, Methuen.

Attorney Sullivan admits that negotiations are under way for the purchase of the property, but will indicate no intended price or the purpose of the purchase. He gave the impression, however, that he was acting on his own behalf and not for a client.

There is considerable conjecture here as to what the property will be used for. One rumor is that the large estate will be divided for residential purposes, one section being for larger residences and the other for the ordinary dwellings.

MAY POSTPONE STATE A. A. R. I. R. MEET

Worcester, Jan. 27.—John F. Harrigan, State president of the A. A. R. I. R., announced that efforts are being made to postpone the State convention of the association which is scheduled for February 12 in Boston until February 28. This action is being taken so that any definite action taken at the Irish conference in Paris can be used to determine the future course of the association in this State, also to await the action taken by the Sinn Fein conference in Ireland February 7. An effort will be made to have Eamonn De Valera present at the Boston convention.

Johnson Sworn In

John P. Johnson of Worcester was sworn in as Commissioner of Immigration at the station in East Boston. Inspector William H. Nita administered the oath.

'L' EARNS OVER MILLION, BUT NO FARE CUT

Must First Repay Advances of Cities and Towns Made to Meet Its Deficits

Under the universal ten-cent fare the Boston Elevated railway earned approximately $1,117,000 above expenditures in the calendar year just closed. But the general ten-cent fare cannot be replaced by a lower fare for at least another year and a half.

The reason for this is that under the provisions of the public control act the Elevated must first repay to cities and towns the amounts advanced by them to meet the deficit of the first year of public operation.

This is the gist of the annual report of the Board of Public Trustees of the Elevated to the Legislature, made public today.

The report explains:

"On the first of next July surplus receipts after the payment of costs of service and of the balance due the reserve fund should approximate at least $600,000, and with favorable working conditions prevailing the balance will no doubt be substantially larger. Under the statute this surplus must be used in reimbursing the cities and towns. The balance of the loan could possibly be paid in the following year, in any event at an early day thereafter."

1920 SHOWED BIG LOSS.

Receipts for the calendar year just past exceed the cost of service by $1,117,541.61, says the report. In the preceding calendar year the cost of service had exceeded receipts by $346,513.81.

Total operating expenses for the year just ended total ed $23,855,094.29. This was against $24,969,124.11 for 1920.

On December 31, 1920, there were also outstanding deficits carried over from the year 1919 that amounted to $468,807.54. These obligations, totaling $580,659.38, have been met and $311,665.86 paid into the reserve fund as required by law.

The total number of passengers paying fares during 1921 was 327,256,081, as against 330,726,861 for 1920.

5-CENT LINES AIDED.

"Notwithstanding the general lessening of traffic upon railroads and railways which began with the industrial depression last spring on the Boston Elevated there has been an increase in number of passengers carried. This has been due in large measure to the experimental operations of five-cent surface lines for short distance travel without transfer.

"The number of passengers now riding for a five-cent fare is 18 per cent. of the total riding. With the establishment of additional lines to be in operation within this and next month the number will undoubtedly exceed 50 per cent of the total riding. This limited local service adds to the usefulness of the railway without losing material number from those who pay the basic ten-cent fare.

"The experiment with this service has attracted the attention of transportation experts in many large cities. It may well lead to the adoption in some part of a modified distribution of the charge for riding.

"The operating costs of 1921 reflect lower prices of coal and materials decrease in wages, the less severe conditions of the winter season and changes that have promoted efficient operation.

"After noting various improvements the trustees state that two 'exceedingly important and far reaching changes in rapid transit are now pending. One involves virtually a new transthoroughfare for the operation of three-car trains from a terminal at Prudential Field, Allston through the Boylston and Tremont Subways and over the East Cambridge Viaduct to Lechmere square, Cambridge, where a new terminal is being constructed.

"This change will substitute one single car for several small units and through the use of trains with additional cars will mean more frequent rapid and regular service that will materially relieve the congestion in the Subway which is the subject of continued annoyance and well-founded complaint.

"The other change is that proposed in the lines operating on Huntington avenue through the substitution of train for single car service. It is a preliminary step toward moving to a rapid transit thoroughfare from Park street to Brookline village at which point passengers will transfer from cars on outlying lines in the same manner as at points that connect with rapid transit divisions."

WILLIAM M. WOOD ILL WITH LUMBAGO

FAMOUS WRITER WHO DIED OF PNEUMONIA

MRS. NELLIE BLY

One of Mrs. Bly's journalistic feats was penetrating fortress of Przemysl, important Austrian fortress in Galicia, when it was invested by Grand Duke Michael. Her stories were gripping pen pictures.

NELLIE BLY IS PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Writer Who Covered Galician Campaign Dies in New York Hospital

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 27.—Nellie Bly, pioneer in Miss Jones' I. Sea... one of the sons a Welsh... ist of the Pittsburg Dispatch and author of numerous books and magazine articles, died at a hospital here today.

She became famous many years ago when, almost unheard of, she made the trip around the world in less than 80 days, and she continued to be a prominent figure in newspaper work and literature until her death.

Nellie Bly was famous for a daring exploit when she was committed to Bellevue hospital on the charge of insanity, in order that she might write a story of conditions there. She was committed by a police magistrate, and was released only after a searching investigation by a grand jury.

Some years ago Miss Bly married a wealthy manufacturer of Pittsburg. She was a widow at the time of her death.

Miss Bly was born near Pittsburg and received a common school education. She was a newspaper writer from her early youth, and became well known as a correspondent in Mexico, where she went to report conditions there.

The story that made her famous was that of a trip around the world which she made in 72 days, seven hours and 14 minutes, beating the record of Phileas Fogg, hero of Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days." The feat was performed before the days of fast ocean travel.

Among the other stories she wrote were those of the Siege of Paris, the Franco-Prussian war, the Johnstown flood and the Pullman strike.

Miss Bly was a member of the Pennsylvania Society of New York, the Pen and Pencil club of Pittsburg and the Women's Press club of New York.

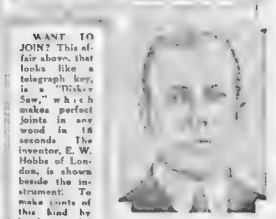
HOW ABOUT IT, GIRLS? This young man has been called the handsomest in the world. His name is Joseph Schilkraut. His acting is causing wide comment. Shown here as the "Orphans of the Storm" hero.

A DOG-GONE GOOD CADDY! Even if he growls once in a while about his pay, "Arno," clever police dog, makes an admirable boy on the links and never titters when his master, H. C. Phipps of N. Y., makes a bad shot.

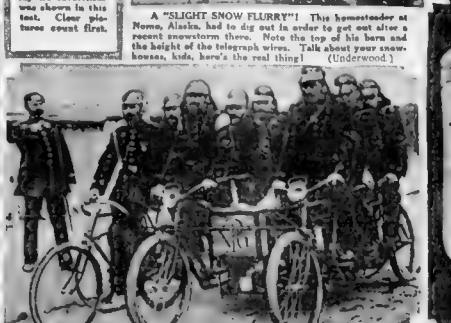
MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON, 60, walked from Sioux City, Iowa., to plead with the President for the release of her boy, Joe Anderson, now in Leavenworth as a deserter. She says her boy is a hero and not a deserter.



WANT TO JOIN? This affair above, that looks like a telegraph key, is a "Dinky Saw," which makes perfect joints in any wood in 18 seconds. The inventor, E. W. Hobbs of London, is shown beside the instrument. To make joints of this kind by hand would take a half hour.

J. FREDERICK BYERS of Pittsburgh, Pa., newly-elected president of the United States Golf Association, who urges uniformity of rules all over the world. This makes the game truly international.

TODAY'S WINNER! Miss Louise Pooler, 64 Park St., Lewiston, Me., will be mailed a check for $5. Again we wish to say no favorities was shown in this test. Clear pictures count first.



A "SLIGHT SNOW FLURRY"! This homesteader at Nome, Alaska, had to dig out in order to get out after a recent snowstorm there. Note the top of his barn and the height of the telegraph wires. Talk about your snow-houses, kids, here's the real thing! (Underwood.)

THEY'RE OFF! All the racetrack thrills can now be enjoyed aboard ship with this recently invented game, inaugurated on S. S. American Legion. Played on a chalk-marked deck representing a race course—with pasteboard horses and dice. Course is divided into 16 squares, and 6 horses participate. The dice caster takes position near start and finish. Players make their wagers on horses, numbered from 1 to 6. Dice are thrown and the horses are moved from square to square, according to the numbers on dice. If Nos. 1 and 2 appear, horses 1 and 3 advance one square. Horse moves forward two squares when double numbers appear. A game easily made. (Wide World.)

NO, GENTLE READER, This isn't the New York Officer's Day Off! He "does his duty and he did it." Escorting timid damsels across the ice in Central Park is one of the moments in their day's work. Yes, Oscar, they get paid for this work.

MR. FIREMEN, SAVE MY CHIEF-ILD! Gone are the old bucket brigades, the ancient hand-drawn trucks, but who ever heard of a bicycle fire brigade? These chaps above are not warriors bold, but regular honest-to-goodness fire laddies—of Steglitz, Germany. This picture of them was taken at a recent review. They dash to a blaze in military formation. (Wide World.)

IF YOUR ICEMAN gives you an icy stare when you chide him for his ice bill, just tell him to go "do his stuff" on the Eskimos, and put in one of these ice refrigerators. The water trickling down the side of this concrete container evaporates and keeps the contents cool. You can easily make one. (International.)

the Open door

to the Northern & Central California Market

HERE is the "open sesame" to a market of ready response and rich resource. Standing at its very threshold, the San Francisco Examiner offers the quickest approach —the most direct entry—to the Northern and Central California market.

The San Francisco Examiner's overwhelming domination of its field, both from point of circulation and in scope of influence, is not even approximated by any other newspaper in the West.

It has the largest city and suburban circulation, both daily and Sunday, of any newspaper in San Francisco. It has the largest country circulation, both daily and Sunday, of any newspaper in San Francisco. It has the largest street sales, the largest rural route circulation and the largest home delivered circulation of any newspaper in San Francisco.

The San Francisco Examiner occupies the unique position of dominating all other San Francisco papers in every class of circulation and advertising. It also dominates completely and decisively the circulation of all papers in both morning and evening fields.

The net paid lead of the San Francisco Examiner over the other morning paper is 59,531 daily or over 67%, and 170,074 Sunday or over 136%. The net paid lead of the San Francisco Examiner over the first evening paper is 53,063 daily or over 55%. The net paid lead of the San Francisco Examiner over the second evening paper is 74,806 or over 102%.

The net City circulation alone of the San Francisco Examiner on Sunday very nearly approximates the total Sunday circulation of the second morning paper, including its city, suburban and country. Within the city limits the Sunday Examiner circulates as many papers as there are English-speaking families in San Francisco.

CONLEY SEES VICTORY FOR SIEGAL IN BATTLE WITH ROBSON

By JACK CONWAY

Nate Siegal isn't worrying a great deal about Tommy Robson's punching power. He believes his own aggressiveness will offset this advantage on the part of his opponent when they mingle in their ten-round engagement at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building Saturday night.

Siegal is at Diamond Hill, Rhode Island, busily engaged in [illegible] and Nate is working [illegible] the best of physical condition when he entered the ring [illegible] Tom Conley, the West Ender, declared Larry Conley today: "Some of those individuals who confess they know everything about the flatic art contend that Robson's right hand punch will crush Siegal's fighting spirit.

"This is a joke. I consider Young Kirby every bit as stiff a puncher as Robson.' And everybody knows how clever handled the Lawrence man at close fields.

"It would be foolish for me to say Robson cannot hit. He probably packs as stiff a sock in his right hand as any man of his right in the country.

"Siegal, however, can stand up under punishment and fight back hard. In fact, it seems to give Nate added fighting spirit when he is stung by an opponent.

"Then, too, Siegal is a much better boxer today than he was a couple of years ago. His left jab the jaw will prove a mighty fault obstacle for Robson to hdle. Everybody knows that a jab can usually offset a right-hand punch.

Siegal will also do some socking [illegible] And maybe Robson won't [illegible] when Nate is bouncing [illegible] right hand wallops off his [illegible] jaw.

It would be much difference in [illegible] Robson [illegible] under 154 pounds, while Siegal [illegible] in the vicinity of 142 [illegible]

[illegible] been a heavy demand for [illegible] at the Commercial Club's [illegible] at room 12, No. 53 School [illegible]

Terry Martin has started to prepare himself for his ten-round bout with Joe Lynch which will be staged by the Arena A. C. next Friday night. Martin is very much a come-back as he proved by his wins over Johnny Curtin and the Frenchman.

Lynch is intent upon regaining the world's bantamweight title and believes that the best way to reach his objective is by meeting all comers.

The Arena A. C. has opened its downtown office at Room 15, No. 28 School street, where reservations may be secured.

The Mount Pleasant section of Roxbury is all agog over the Pat McCarthy-Tom Gibbons fight next Thursday night in Mechanics Building. The fans in that section think that McCarthy can lick any light heavyweight and they are going to turn out en masse.

Pat is a member of the Rose Croix Council, Knights of Columbus, and the idol of the Roxbury Red Sox Club. Both organizations have asked Johnny McGann to reserve an entire section.

McCarthy will enter the ring weighing about 170 pounds. He will be in the top of form. It is the turning point in Pat's career as a fighter. He is brim full of confidence that he can outbox Gibbons. Pat has been looking for this match for a long time. Dan Dowd, the South Boston boxing expert is responsible for urging Pat into the match. Dowd was offered twice by Gibbons but each time he came back to Boston and told McCarthy that the Roxbury man could beat Gibbons.

Despite the fact the Faneuil Club is guaranteeing Gibbons close to $5,000 for his bout, I offer the match to the public at popular prices. The tickets went on sale today.

Says Couples Who Do Their Spooning at Railroad Stations Know When to Hug Each Other Without Looking at a Timetable

Couples who have no homes are doing their spooning in railroad stations. They go down to the depot and kiss each other every time a train comes in.

One suitor spent his courtship this way, and after he got married he kissed his wife every time he heard a train whistle.

His wife didn't mind it so much until they moved down near a roundhouse.

Couples who live in small cities don't get much chance to spoon. If they miss one train they've got to wait three or four hours for another hug.

One country clump got his training in a little town, and when he moved to New York he was a riot on the Grand Central.

He got so that he was kissing his sweetheart right on schedule.

He became so efficient that he could tell her when she was going to get another hug without even looking at the timetable.

She got sore at him one day when a train came in and he forgot to kiss her, but he consoled her by telling her he was on the second section.

His sweetheart got so that she could tell by his kisses what trains were coming in. As soon as he'd hug her she'd know whether it was a Boston local or the Twentieth Century Limited.

He didn't care what trains he met if the Twentieth Century Limited was late, he'd go over and meet the Chicago Express.

And then he'd meet a couple of locals between times.

He even got so that he'd go down to the water front and meet the night boat from Albany.

He was always in the Grand Central when there were any trains due.

He'd kiss his sweetheart good bye on one train and then welcome her back on another.

She got so that she had to carry a timetable to tell whether she was arriving or leaving.

He didn't care whether or not the train was late—he was always on time.

Nick Flatley Says

SOME criticism there is as to Nate Siegal's judgment in stepping out of his own class, welterweight, and taking on Tommy Robson, middleweight, at the Commercial show tomorrow night. But as we can see, Nate is receiving himself duly in bit of money, and not putting his reputation in any danger what ever.

If he does get trounced, his friends can console him by remarking that the extra weight the opponent carried was too much, and that will settle that. If he wins, he'll get a lot of those cheers and hints, and be properly quited for.

Nate hasn't been able to win in his own class lately, and by stepping out he may change his luck. There cannot be more than six pounds difference between the boys, according to State law, and that much weight doesn't mean much in the ring if you get past the unskilful clowns.

MANY a famous scrapper has been cut out of his own class, and thereby acquired fame and glory. Jack Britton, after polishing off most of the good welters went after the heavier birds, and didn't have any trouble licking them. He could give Mike O'Dowd lessons, when Michael was at his best.

If Joe Wolcott fought at his own weight only, he would have had a looseing life. He mauled around the big fellows and twenty or thirty pounds didn't stop him from taking a lot of Cuss Jeffries, Stanley Ketchell, in fact all the great fighters of other days didn't bother about the tonnage the enemy hauled into the fray. A good battler knows he has the necessary ammunition and lets the other fellow do the worrying.

MISTER Robson, on the other hand, seems to be picking something. A little while ago he earned a decision over Gibbons and thereby hurdled right into the ring calendar. He had himself up for a chance at competition. He figures to be a good card attwithers.

But if he happens to be beaten up by a welterweight, who isn't the best in the league by any means, Tommy will find his market value considerably depreciated. There surely are enough scrappers in public up in middle ranks to keep the Malden scrapper busy.

He isn't tearing off a soft assignment in young Siegal, who can give and take a hammering with anybody. Looks as if a couple of native punch swingers might furnish a main bout of real class.

We read with glad, distended eye
The story of some boxing guy,
Whose victims still unconscious lie
In half a hundred rings.
Then buy a ticket for a show
Where said phenom is booked to go;
And watch some dumbbell lay
Him low.

In one more of those "things"

JOHNNY WILSON is said to be negotiating for the purchase of the Jersey City Baseball Club. Probably wants to get even with the natives, who said a whole lot of mean things about him the only time he ever boxed, or tried to, there.

FROM the screeches of the hockey fans, something must be done shortly about officiating at the Arena, or the game will slide away from its present popularity. After almost every game, there's a grumble of some sort. The constant tooting of the whistle wrecks the flashy charges down the rink that constitute the real thrill for the spectators of puck chasing.

MOST of the experts admitted that a couple of the B. A. A. goals against Pere Marquette the other evening were scored by players offside. The tallies wrecked one of the sturdiest contests staged this Winter. Real infringement of the rules was overlooked, while at least three athletes were chased off the ice for faults of others.

THERE are good officials in Canada, witness from that sector tell us. All the local talent has been tried out, without any satisfaction. Where referees are paying two or three times a week to watch amateur contests, it wouldn't be a strain on Arena finances to import some bird and pay him what he's worth. The game is big enough for that, now.

JUDGE LANDIS fines the Philadelphia Nationals $200 for pulling a secret agreement with Grover Alexander. Find that one of the regulars will now be fired, the sum representing what the Philly owners want to pay their pupils per season.

A. SAPP'S FABLES.

A BIRD stepped into a telephone booth. He happened to have a nickle. Central answered as soon as same was dropped in. This is a fable. He didn't hear "nickety, nickety, nickety, click —The line is busy." No feminine voice answered, "They don't stay ewer." This is a fable. He didn't get the wrong number. He got what he called for, and they lived happy ever after. Moral—What a beautiful thought.

The football players will hold a meeting in conjunction with the banquet to elect a captain for next Fall.

The B. U. Athletic Council announces that the date of November 11 on the football schedule next Fall has been given to Providence College. The game will be played at Providence.

Bowser Defeats Ludecke

Paul Bowser defeated Martin Ludecke at the Grand Opera House last night. Bowser scored his first fall in 7 minutes with a front body scissors. He got his second fall in 13 minutes with a crotch and body hold. That was the main bout.

Harry Mannas won over Chakoo Hassane in a short bout lasting 7 minutes. Mannas also defeated Charles Jaxon in 8 minutes.

LYNCH WORKING HARD FOR BOUT WITH MARTIN

New York Bantamweight Is Eager to Win Back Lost Crown

Joe Lynch, world's ex-bantamweight champion of the world, is training like a Trojan for his ten-round decision bout with Terry Martin, the New England bantam king, which is scheduled to be staged at the Arena A. C. on the night of February 3. The exiltie holder, who forced Johnny Ruff, the present bantam king, to beat it for Europe rather than meet the Irishman in a titular battle, realizes that Martin is one of the toughest men in the class and is anxious to whip him when they clash.

Lynch showed when he bested Al Walker in Gotham that he was back in the form he was in when he whipped the great Pete Herman for the title. In the Walker setto, the Westsider was stretched on the floor in the two minutes of fighting. Joe was a revelation in that bout. He was as quick as a panther on his feet punched accurately and cleverly avoided his opponent's rushes.

Joe is not after his old crown and intends to take on every man in the bantam class and thus force Ruff to meet him by disposing of all the so-called challengers. In order to do this, Lynch real sea he must beat every adversary who thinks he should meet Ruff for the championship, and Joe is confident he will have little trouble proving his superiority over the flock of good little men who are encraged milling away for honors and glory in their division.

TECH DEFEATS AGGIES ON A LONG SHOT

Russ Acosta' quintet stepped into luck at Tech last night when Dave Isaacson broke the tie score in casing a log shot in the last few seconds of play thus giving Tech the victory by one goal margin, 30 to 18.

The farmers had come prepared to repeat their fine performance over the engineers early in the season. But they found that their opponents had not been idle and had done some hard training.

4,000 Deer, Season's Toll of Hunters in Granite State

By Associated Press.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 27.—New Hampshire is still a happy hunting ground.

More than 4,000 deer were killed in the state in the last hunting season. According to the office of the state fish and game commissioner, the exact figures are not known, despite a new law requiring each person killing a deer to tag his quarry and send a coupon to the commissioner's office.

CHAMPION WILL NOT FIGHT WILLS

New York, Jan 27.—"Jack Dempsey will not meet Harry Wills for $150,000 or for several times that sum," announced the champion's manager, Jack Kearns, when he learned of the offer of William A. Brady of a purse of $200,000, to be divided 75-25 for a fight before the title holder and the negro challenger.

The public does not want such a fight" continued Kearns.

BRITISH MAY ADOPT U. S. PLAN IN PLAY FOR GOLF TITLE

New York, Jan. 27.—Increased interest and keener competition between the amateur golfers of America and amateur players in Britain are the chief reasons for the proposal of the British Lawn Tennis Association that the present challenge cup contention, at present between Great Britain and the United States, be changed to a team play at the next meeting.

Harold Hilton, [illegible] golfer, who is now [illegible] golf writer, is the author of the proposal. Hilton, who has played a part in the Ryder Cup Amateur Championship matches, is of the opinion that several more British players could be developed if the matches were changed to team play.

As the next meeting for championship to be played in England this year and as it is always likely that it will go to the Pacific coast in 1923 the chairman of the Lawn Tennis Association is anxious to get the views of the players from both sides of the water on the proposal.

It is too early to obtain that opinion, but it is understood that the Australian players will welcome the change, as it will make it less difficult for them to take part in the championship. The Australians have always been handicapped by the long journey to and from England, and with the present exchange rate it would be difficult for them to send a team of players to England. Interest in America in sending more than a strong representation.

TECHNOLOGY THINKS IT CAN GIVE HARVARD A BEATING

By CHARLES E. PARKER

With Harvard's traditional rivals, Yale and Princeton, evidencing little hockey ability thus far this season, the Crimson, in its drive for the leadership in college hockey for the current season, is anticipating its most difficult tests in the game with M. I. T. at the Arena tonight, and that with Dartmouth some weeks hence.

Tech already has taken the measure of the Yale and other strong college organizations bowing only to Fred Jacques's Boston College sextet and then by the margin of a single goal, and Tech comes tonight to frame confident of taking the measure of a second member of the so-called Big Three.

Harvard, however, rules a slight favorite. Crimson followers admit their team of this season is not to be compared with recent Harvard outfits. The loss of such men as Bigelow, Snelling, Stubbs, Holmes, Huntin and Emmons, totaled a tremendous drain on experienced material, and Coaches Minor and Claflin have had a difficult task in forming the present ice array and developing team play and skillful puckhandling.

Tech believes Harvard is vulnerable at the goal position, the leading guard, one of which are Higgins and Flint, of the Tech coach has been endeavoring to develop men that will enable him to overcome the Crimson's sturdy outer defence and enable the sharpshooters to play upon Harvard's inexperienced goalies.

Whether such a system has been perfected will be revealed tonight, and upon it the result of the game may depend.

Tech boasts of a star net man in Captain Neale, and, physically is the stronger team. But to date Tech has shown the combination work that has marked Harvard's play.

Last year Tech [illegible] defeated Harvard, 5 to 4. The goals for the crimson were made solely by Captain Healy and Enright. Rivard made three for Berlin. The other goal was shot by LaCroix.

Evening school games at the Arena always have been a big success. The game tonight will bring together Newton High and Cambridge Latin, two teams battling for first place in the sun in the Interscholastic League.

Newton is favored to win because of its acknowledged ability to play a fast game.

Cambridge Latin is depending greatly on Tubber Cronin, for effective work. This lad is a likely looking hockey player.

Two well pointed teams will meet Tuesday night when Harvard and B. A. A. come together. These teams usually have just early in the season, but Manager Brooks preferred to hold off the game for just such an attraction as the Hobey Baker benefit program.

B. U. ATHLETES IN B. A. A. CONTESTS

Coach Hedlund Will Have Big Bunch of Track Men in Indoor Meet

The Boston University track team will get into action as the B. A. A. meet next week. Coach Hedlund has some good material. The men have been out three days a week since the middle of December and they are in good condition.

For the relay team those who have shown the best are Linnie, Mathewson, Richards, Tobin, Bowin, Ridder and Captain Woodward. The old men in the time trials held at the Tech Field.

Each Stacy, Harold Dedin and Walter Higgins who have been [illegible] up well, are on the sick list, but will return in time to take part in the B. A. A. events. Higgins is a freshman, and the members of his class depend on him to make as good a showing as he made at the annual sophomore-freshman [illegible] which he won the flag rush.

Coach Hedlund is assisted by Harry Barwise, the former B. A. A. high jumper. He is instructing the high jumpers in the B. A. A. gymnasium. He is a great thing for the [illegible] squad.

In Tom Dignan, the shotput [illegible] men have another instructor as well as trainer. The weight men are [illegible] whipped into shape by Dignan, the college of Liberal Arts [illegible] star.

The entries so far for the I. A. A. A. events are Linnie for the dashes, [illegible] for the 1,000-yard run. Still a number [illegible] for the mile event.

"BACK PAY"

The Story of a Girl's Soul Redeemed Through Love

SYNOPSIS

"BACK PAY" is the story of Hester Bevins, a country girl with a "crepe de chine" soul, and Jerry Newcombe, who loved Hester with a love that surmounted every obstacle.

Hester lives in a small town where the people with whom she is compelled to associate at Mrs. Simmons' boarding house annoy her with their stupid ideas. Her one friend in town is Jerry Newcombe, who drives the delivery wagon for Finlay's general merchandise store. Jerry has fallen very much in love with Hester, but the narrow, dull life of the country town is so boring that she cannot bring herself to promise to marry him and settle [illegible] and become like her table companions at the boarding [illegible].

Hester's nerves are tried to the breaking point, and she finally decides that she must give up this deadening life which she has endured for eight years and try to get along in New York city. She parts with Jerry and leaves the town.

"He's been gassed, his left lung is burned out; so much as I hate to say it—it's better so—for him."

Jerry—Jerry.

"There, there," he patted her shoulder, "it's war, my dear lady—my own boy—" he turned away, "we mustn't give up to these things."

There was a moment's silence, then the doctor cleared his throat. "I—I—once against I went to [illegible] harm cheer him up may [illegible] fact I'm sure it will—he's always asking for you—they tell me it was the same aboard ship—too bad—I'm sorry."

Hester made her way to the car was driven back to the apartment on the Drive was met by Kitty.

"Hello, kid; I've been waiting for you why, what's the matter; you look as though you'd been seeing ghosts."

Seeing Ghosts

"Yes, Kitty—ghosts I have—I've been to the hospital—that boy—I told you about—my boy—Jerry—he's back."

"Wounded? That's too bad."

"Blind?" echoed Kitty, shutting her eyes for a second as though to help her realize the horror of that word; "Poor fellow!"

"I'm going to be with him all I can, Kitty—count me out of every thing here—I'll know how—if the doctor s right."

Good girl, Hester; but what will Wheeler say?"

"I don't care what he says—"

"Oh" cried Kitty. "You're not—you're not in love with this fellow after all?"

"What if I am?" cried Hester "You don't think I'm in love with Wheeler do you? Ate you in love with Speed?"

"That slacker?" sneered Kitty "Give me credit for some sense, sister"

"Oh I don't know what I'm saying any more—why is it the fine men get their heads to them and the rat-eyed ones stay home and rake in the money?"

"O Lord" shrugged Kitty, "why, oh why—why do we help 'em to spend it?"

Neither of them attempted to answer that question.

"I suppose there is no use of asking you to come to my little affair tonight, is there?"

"Not the slightest—I couldn't—I'd be a walking death's head."

"Well, so long then—oh," she paused and turned back, "what'd you tell Jerry?"

"Tell him, what do you mean?"

"Are you still designer for a swell firm, or what? I remember when you told me long ago that he knew about you, I said he was some man, and told you you'd better marry him—you remember that, don't you?"

"Like yesterday," said Hester.

"You don't owe him any less, now he's sick and dying—you get me, don't you?"

Believed in Her

Hester sat thinking after Kitty had gone. No, she didn't owe him any less—he was the one man who had faith in her; the one person in the world who had believed in her better self from the beginning; most men would have turned away before the hard facts. Jerry had stood by, never reproachful, never anything but loving, forgiving, hoping and waiting—he was waiting now—waiting for the call we all have to hear but he did not know it.

The maid came in to announce luncheon. Hester did not hear; all the balance of the day she sat going over and over in a ceaseless whirligig the events of the past few years.

And in the end her mind was made up—she would pay in so far as she could the debt she owed.

"Call me at 8 o'clock," she said to the maid, "and have the car waiting."

Hester was sure of herself; sure of her good intentions, but a little hazy as to her procedure. All this luxury that she found so enjoyable was not hers, it was Wheeler's; in the first moments of her exultant determination to pay back to Jerry something of what she owed him, she had forgotten Wheeler completely forgotten him even when riding in his car and wearing the rings he had given her

She had forgotten for the time being that she belonged to Mr. Wheeler in so far as all the means of living were concerned; now she remembered apropos of nothing at all that she still retained the simple little dress she had worn when she left the downtown office and that in that dress was her salary for the last week in that office.

It was as though a heavy truck had run head on into the elaborate limousine in which she was riding so smoothly Twenty-five dollars and an out of date dress was all she could really call her own

She could not call her own the money Wheeler had given her the country house Wheeler had given her; the diamonds and pearls Wheeler had given her, for all these things had come from the hands of Wheeler, and that made them impossible to pass directly or indirectly into her life with Jerry

Something to Think Over.

Something to ponder over as she drove; the vision of the women she had seen yesterday at the hospital came to her; they had come in the street cars and their case was hers. Love is the great leveler. She knew and her heart told her it was so that she should have come just as they had come, but wearing the clothes that Wheeler had paid for, and yet she found it impossible to take this violent step, she shut her mind on it; one thing at a time—she would come to that later Jerry was the great problem now —afterwards—tomorrow—

"Manana," says the Spaniard, and manana never comes.

And yet only partially engaged as she was in an armor of good resolutions. Hester felt the better for them; when she saw Jerry it seemed as though the giving up of these things that held her would be the easiest matter in the world, she did not realize how strong was that hold over her, and Jerry was full of plans

You must not take chances with constipation when statistics tell you that nine-tenths of all sickness can be traced to it! You must get permanent relief; you must cure constipation out of your system!

Realize that pills and cathartics, at best, can only afford temporary relief, while they are irritating to the delicate intestinal tract.

Now—compare the action of these pills and cathartics with the natural and wholesome effect of Kellogg's Bran, cooked and crumbled. Science knows of no such wonderful sweeper, cleanser and purifier of the bowels as Kellogg's Bran, for it is simply nature's food. Bran's effect is certain and relief permanent if at least two tablespoonfuls are eaten daily. Chronic cases should eat as much more as is necessary for results. Taken constantly, Kellogg's Bran will drive constipation from the system. Your physician will indorse the use of Kellogg's Bran for constipation!

Eat Kellogg's Bran either as a delicious and nutritious cereal, or sprinkle it over your favorite cereal. Eat it in many other foods which are made more appetizing by its nut-like flavor! Kellogg's Bran pancakes are the best ever tasted! Use it in raisin bread or muffins, gravies, macaroons, pancakes, etc. (Recipes on package.)

P. S.—Pimples are caused by constipation. Kellogg's Bran will clear them up and also free your breath from intestinal odors.—Advt.

The morning newspaper discloses the fact to Hester that Jerry, blinded and gassed in France, is in a New York hospital.

What Is the Real Test of a Man's Love?

By Beatrice Fairfax

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Life

"Good when the bugles are blowing,
It is to be iron and fire,
Good to be oak in the forcy,
Ice to a guilty desire
But when the tumult is over,
Though the World marvel the while,
Give to a woman a woman's Heart, and a child's to the child."

"HOW should a man lover?" writes Lisle. "Should he be matter-of-fact and businesslike even when he cares for a girl, or should he be romantic and full of sentiment? My chum thinks a man who is worth the name should always be stern and strong, and that even if a girl misses something in his love making she'll know there's nothing weak and silly in his character.

"I, on the other hand, feel that unless a man can give me tenderness and thrills there's nothing like real love between us. If a man wouldn't give up any engagement, business or otherwise, to come at my call, I'd say he didn't love me. I've broken my engagement because the man to whom I was ready to give everything, would neglect me any time for work. I didn't see much happiness in such a marriage as ours would have been. I've an idea, you'll say I'm right."

You're wrong, my dear Elsie, both in imagining I'll say you're right —and in the theories you defend. Life is something besides love making. It is something besides illusion and sentiment

Our whole existence is based on certain economic conditions which we cannot escape or evade. The butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker must all be met and reckoned with. Any practical and sane man realizes that neither he nor his love are much good to a woman unless he fortifies the gift of himself and his feelings with a background of success

A worth while man wants to save his wife from worry and even the minor worries of life. He wants his wife to have as much as the rest of the women she knows. He longs to have his children well-educated, well-dressed, well-fed and well-placed in the world's scheme of things.

Men are used to having "dependents." They are brave and cheerful about it. But it takes a lot of courage to assume the responsibility of taking care of a wife in sickness and health and of being big children into a world which will give them nothing for nothing.

When a girl is in love she likes to dream through the days. She likes to spend the evening in her lover's arms.

And when he cannot be with her all the time, she may be so sentimental, impractical and selfishly absorbed in her feelings that she doesn't stop to think of all the other things besides love that go to make up the world

But the wise woman recognizes all the elements that go to make up life, and so she doesn't want her man to be a mere lover. She wants him to be a fighter in the fray of life, a citizen of the world and a conqueror of the temptations that come to him from the dreams he too might like to make all of existence, though life is an affair for the wide-awake and energetic

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

THERE are folks of every kind keeping old Earth spinning, men of brawn and men of mind all must have an inning None should ever dare to boast, jeering at his neighbor, "I'm the chap that's need ed most." Everyone must labor Sweeping floors is not an art, yet 'twould pain us sadly if none played the scrub girl's part when said floors look badly If the dust and trash each day 'round our ships should gather would we want it cleared away? I should say so, rather! Mops and pails look good to me; though some people tell us work's beneath their dignity. I believe they're jealous. Black is twice as rich as cream. White has not a copper, still upon the whole the scheme seems quite right and proper. Simpson buts his cash away, John son is a spender; Hopkins doesn't like things gay; Hickson dotes on splendor. There is work for every hand, just to keep things going, some paint pictures that are grand, some are built for beauty. So don't try to puzzle out other fellows' uses, stick to things you knew about, making no excuses.

AN INTERFERING AUNT

A LITTLE STORY OF A CURIOUS MISTAKE

By Lily Wandel

MARIAN was examining the powder on her nose in front of the cloudy office mirror at noontime when without warning the office door flew open and fully two hundred pounds of silk, fur, veils and perfume, plus a commanding personality, burst into the room.

"Aunt Thelma!" she recognised with a gasp. "Wherever do you come from? You're supposed to be in Geneva or Nice or somewhere;" and flew to welcome her

"My dear," panted the heavy matron as she struggled out of an enormous fur wrap, "I just landed."

Marian's eyes opened wide with incredulity. What on earth could her aunt want? "You were fortunate, indeed, to find me—"

"Marian, you poor child," laughed her aunt, with something like pity in her voice "I know where to find you, all right. And if I had come ten years later I would have marched straight to R. Voss & Co., and would have found their old, reliable little stenographer faithfully at her desk, as though she had been tacked there when they put down the carpet."

"Aunt Thelma," began Marian furiously, "if—"

"Listen to me," interrupted her aunt imperatively. "I'm down right sorry for you. My conscience pricked me all the way home—otherwise I would not be here. I shouldn't have gone off that way, washed my hands of you. No, that was wrong. But you were the most headstrong, stubborn girl and the most foolish! You know how delighted I was when you became engaged to Richard Voss. I was quite ready to do anything for you

"And then you—you silly girl—quarreled with such an eligible young man and actually broke your engagement! Marian Stolce, don't tell me that I didn't try to talk to you and convince you of your folly—don't blame me——"

"Yes," admitted Marian, "but—"

"No buts. If you are sorry—you do care for him. Keep quiet and leave this entirely to me. You are formally invited to dinner at my house tomorrow evening. Not a word—look your prettiest, please."

"I suppose Richard will be there?"

"He certainly will and I expect you to be very nice to him."

The following evening found Marian, pink-cheeked and excited in Aunt Thelma's hall getting out of her evening wrap and looking very lovely in a white lace dinner frock

"Marian" said Aunt Thelma, her broad bosom heaving, "the most awful thing"—there actually were tears in her eyes—"he's married! I just heard it this afternoon!"

"I tried to tell you yesterday, but you wouldn't let me," answered Marian quietly. "No use wailing over spilt milk. I mean to enjoy myself with Richard, married or not!"

"Marian, please! You're not going to flirt with him?"

"Just watch me!"

"Marian," begged Aunt Thelma almost piteously, "be sensible—I'll promise never to interfere again as long as I live! I'm cured, Marian, honestly, I am!"

Richard came in breezily with "Hello, Marian; got here before me" and then to Aunt Thelma "Well, what do you think of my wife?

"Why, er—I haven't met her—you see—"

"What is the matter with you?" he laughed. "There she is!"

With a happy, gloating little chuckle Marian put her arm around Aunt Thelma's fat neck "You dear old interferer! Soon as you left for Europe Richard and I made up and were married! Yesterday I happened to drop in at the office to meet him for lunch and as for my looking fat and tired—well, wait until you see Junior!"

RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

AN ABSORBING SERIAL OF LIFE IN THE CITY

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

"ARE you going out, Dick?" the mother asked. The speaker's eyes were turned in her son's direction. Adelaide noticed that they were not focused upon him, but upon a point at one side of him. The girl was glad to remember that her own mother kept her blind eyes closed That sightless stare was painful to see.

"Why—yes"—the young man began. Then, with a glance at the girl, on whose arm his parent leaned, he added: "I am going out pretty soon—but not just yet, if you are going into the library for a [illegible]."

"Sure we are!" Mr. Hollingshead said heartily. "Come on in and have a smoke with me."

"I am afraid I must ask you not to smoke," the invalid objected.

"Why, certainly! I forgot that smoke bothers you" the husband apologized.

"Ridiculous!" Patricia ejaculated. "You are used to smoke, mother."

"But since my illness it distresses me to smell it," the invalid insisted.

"That's all right—we won't smoke!" the husband interposed. "Here, darling," to his wife, "is a comfortable big chair for you."

"I will get her shawl," Adelaide murmured, hurrying from the room.

She returned in a minute with the shawl. As she entered the room she was aware from the abrupt silence that she had been the subject of conversation during her absence.

"Thank you, my dear," Mrs. Hollingshead said as Adelaide tucked the wrap about her knees. "You are very thoughtful. I feel the chill so quickly."

"You will always feel it if you insist on being bundled up like that," her daughter observed.

"Is there anything else I can do for you now?" Adelaide asked in a low tone as the two men began to talk, while Patricia listened to them

"Nothing, thank you," the blind woman replied.

"Then," still softly, "as you have your family here with you, I will just go off upstairs and leave you with them. Send for me when you want me, please."

A Tactful Exit

"You need not go. You will not be in the way here," the invalid protested

But Adelaide checked her gently "Please, dear—don't say anything about it! Families like to be by themselves sometimes. I know my family does," she added, putting the thin hand affectionately above the shrunken form.

It was ridiculous to be assailed by homesickness. Her mother and sister were within a half hour of her—yet she felt like a stranger in a strange city. Everything here was so different from what she was accustomed to! Of course it was lovely to be in such a handsome house as this—and Mrs. Hollingshead was very pathetic and appealing—and she liked Mr. Hollingshead — and Patricia. Then there was the son. Somehow she did not like him. But that did not matter

She had everything to be thankful for now. So much money would be coming with which to make things easier for her mother and Jennie! And perhaps she could get herself a new dress soon.

She stifled the thought. She was determined to buy nothing for herself until she had saved enough money to pay Hester Mortimer for several months to come. Then, as she remembered Patricia's pretty clothes and her own plain garb, she wondered if she would be able to hold to this resolution.

A man's voice speaking her name brought her to her feet, and she opened her door.

"Miss Brown!" Richard Hollingshead was calling. "Come on down here. My mother wants you—and so do the rest of us."

She hesitated for an instant, then ran down to the first floor.

Richard was waiting for her in the hall.

"I bet you fancied you would be in the way," he accused as she appeared. "Well—when you know this family better, as"—with a little bow —"I hope you may—you will learn that they do not yearn to be all by themselves and nobody with them. Do they, Patty?" he demanded as he and Adelaide entered the library together.

Very Complimentary

"Indeed, no!" Patricia admitted, laughingly. "You need never feel, Miss Brown, that you have to rush off like mad so that the Hollingsheads may enjoy each other's society. We are glad to have you around."

"Thank you!" Adelaide murmured. "You are all very kind."

she meant what she said. These people were certainly kind to her. "the stranger in their midst"—as young Hollingshead had expressed it.

Mrs. Hollingshead held out her hand to her now. "Stay near me, my dear," she urged. "I like to have you. By the way, I have been wondering if you would mind if I dropped the stiff 'Miss Brown' and called you by your first name. What would you think of that?"

"I would be glad to have you do so," Adelaide answered.

"She could not say anything else, mother," Patricia commented, brusquely.

"Do you object?" Mrs. Hollingshead asked in a low tone as the two men began to talk, while Patricia listened to them

"Nothing, thank you," the blind woman replied.

"Then," still softly, "as you have your family here with you, I will just go off upstairs and leave you with them. Send for me when you want me, please."

Richard was waiting for her in the hall.

"I bet you fancied you would be in the way," he accused as she appeared. "Well—when you know this family better, as"—with a little bow —"I hope you may—you will learn that they do not yearn to be all by themselves and nobody with them. Do they, Patty?" he demanded as he and Adelaide entered the library together.

Very Complimentary

"Indeed, no!" Patricia admitted, laughingly. "You need never feel, Miss Brown, that you have to rush off like mad so that the Hollingsheads may enjoy each other's society. We are glad to have you around."

"Thank you!" Adelaide murmured. "You are all very kind."

she meant what she said. These people were certainly kind to her. "the stranger in their midst"—as young Hollingshead had expressed it.

Mrs. Hollingshead held out her hand to her now. "Stay near me, my dear," she urged. "I like to have you. By the way, I have been wondering if you would mind if I dropped the stiff 'Miss Brown' and called you by your first name. What would you think of that?"

"I would be glad to have you do so," Adelaide answered.

"She could not say anything else, mother," Patricia commented, brusquely.

"Do you object?" Mrs. Hollingshead asked in a low tone as the two men began to talk, while Patricia listened to them

"Nothing, thank you," the blind woman replied.

"Then," still softly, "as you have your family here with you, I will just go off upstairs and leave you with them. Send for me when you want me, please."

A Tactful Exit

"You need not go. You will not be in the way here," the invalid protested

But Adelaide checked her gently "Please, dear—don't say anything about it! Families like to be by themselves sometimes. I know my family does," she added, putting the thin hand affectionately above the shrunken form.

It was ridiculous to be assailed by homesickness. Her mother and sister were within a half hour of her—yet she felt like a stranger in a strange city. Everything here was so different from what she was accustomed to! Of course it was lovely to be in such a handsome house as this—and Mrs. Hollingshead was very pathetic and appealing—and she liked Mr. Hollingshead — and Patricia. Then there was the son. Somehow she did not like him. But that did not matter

She had everything to be thankful for now. So much money would be coming with which to make things easier for her mother and Jennie! And perhaps she could get herself a new dress soon.

She stifled the thought. She was determined to buy nothing for herself until she had saved enough money to pay Hester Mortimer for

CLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 800 grains of acid and waste, so we can realize somewhat the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink plenty of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Advertisement.

"DANDERINE"

35-cent Bottle Ends all Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, flat, lean, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Do we all or have I found [illegible]
[illegible] evils [illegible] extravagance, [illegible] and slovenly [illegible] have swept their plants going at full steam and their pay envelopes full every week during the trying times of the last eighteen months?

I was in Dayton, O., this week and watched the people of that city pay a most unusual tribute to the largest works located there, the National Cash Register Company. this company kept its works going 6th full time throughout last year and afforded steady work to five thousand employes. the city authorities declared a half holiday to allow everyone, including each school children, to cheer the entire factory force as it paraded through the beflagged main streets of the city, led by over two hundred salesmen from all parts of the United States and Canada who had sent in more than the full quota of business set for them.

As the parade—fully a mile long, and with every man and woman carrying a flag and interspersed by elaborate floats and by bands—proceeded through the city streets were raised by the thousands of spectators who packed the sidewalks and windows. At a central point the marchers were reviewed by Mayor Frank B. Hale and other officials, by ex-Governor Cox and other prominent citizens.

The fine expression of the indebtedness of the city of Dayton to the star salesmen who had enabled the gigantic N. C. R. factories to keep the smoke flying from the chimneys all through the year and especially to the founder and upbuilder of the business, John H. Patterson, who led the procession and who was then joined by the Mayor.

How this huge concern was able to achieve such a record during the depressed times of last year was dramatically illustrated at a convention of the crack salesmen. The attendance presented with wonderful accuracy the Dayton railway station. Salesmen after salesman arrived too late to join the "1921 Century Point Club Special" which carried the star salesmen to New York city for the second half of last week's convention. Each man carried a grip which told, in large letters, the special reason why he had failed to catch the train.

Then along the track came two men laboriously pushing a handcar. Up jumped General Manager Barringer, shouted that this was no way to make progress in these days, pitched the hand-car off the track, rushed off, and immediately there came steaming along the track a powerful locomotive with President Frederick B. Patterson at the throttle and Barringer as fireman both reaching in oily rags.

What Fred Patterson later told me as to the main reason for the company's success in keeping things going full steam all throug the year will interest business men. He explained that when pessimism was acute in the first half of the year and orders were alarmingly few, dwindling the executives split themselves into two parties and held conventions with the salesmen in charge of each section of the country, discussed conditions very freely with them, ascertained their problems, counselled with them as to how best to meet conditions and fired them with fresh determination, courage and zeal. Advertising was also vigorously used. The results exceeded all expectations. From then on there was no doubt as to the company's ability to go through the year at full blast.

And now a $4,000,000 addition to the plant is to be built.

In quite a few other cities there are large works that maintained full pay envelopes all through 1921 in face of inclement difficulties. Would it not be a glorious act, as well as encouraging, were these citizens to concentrate their appreciation in some such manner as that adopted by Dayton?

The burdens of most men have not been light nor are they yet light, and it would be gratifying and stimulating to them were they given people to show that they recognize the incalculably valuable service rendered by those who create employment—by those who have toiled sweatingly, and successfully to avert widespread unemployment—and to keep things going.

Perhaps the reading of the following stirring poem, written by Herbert Clay Sisson, and addressed to the salesmen who have done the hundreds per cent. may induce you with renewed nerve to send you forth to grapple with the current conditions with redoubled determination and vigor:

[illegible]
And [illegible]
You [illegible]
[illegible]

100-YEAR-OLD FIRM NEVER IN TROUBLE

Spillane Tells of Philadelphia Concern That Has Weathered War and Panics

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—In a building at No. 327 South Front street, Philadelphia, that is 140 years old, is the firm of Dourdeuore & Dourdeuore which, on May 22, will be 100 years old and which in the 100 years has been in the hands of only two generations of the one family. Bertram Dourdeuore who founded it, and Atlee Dourdeuore, his son, who now conducts it.

In the mercantile history of America there probably is not another such instance of this character. In all the 100 years of its life the firm has never housed, with one exception, in structures within a few hundred feet of its present location.

In all the 100 years the firm never had known financial trouble. It has weathered panics and wars. It has done a business averaging $1,000,000 a year for the 100 years and it not only is bustling for business today, but has added quite a number of new customers to its list in the last few months.

NOTED CUSTOMERS.

It imports cocoanut oil, olive oil and palm oil for soap making. It has merchandised in tallow, greases and animal oil. It has dealt with Colgate & Co., Proctor & Gamble, Fels & Co., B. T. Babbitt & Co., and such houses from the time of their beginning or the beginning of Dourdeuore & Dourdeuore. It dealt with Fels & Co. when that concern's purchases was one barrel of tallow and it dealt with William Proctor, Sr., when his buying was limited to that of new candles.

In various ways this is one of the most remarkable families in America. The name is Portuguese but centuries ago the Dourdeures were driven from Portugal to France by the invasion of the Moors and settled near Moessac.

Bertram Dourdeuore was brought to America by John LaTour, companion of Stephen Girard. He was the youngest of four children who lived ninety-eight, ninety-seven, ninety-four and eighty-seven years respectively, and he himself was the father of fourteen children. The Dourdeuores are long-lived.

ON A CASH BASIS.

Atlee Dourdeuore is a youngster of sixty-three today and in excellent health. His grandfather lived to 108. Atlee Dourdeuore has been in business forty-eight years, and his father had been in business sixty-seven years. Atlee Dourdeuore gets the name, Atlee, from Dr. Washington H. Atlee, whose father was a companion of George Washington.

Every start to finish the house of Dourdeuore has conducted business on a cash basis. It did its own banking for many years. Today it has its account with the Fourth Street National Bank. It owned its account the day the bank started business and it has remained with it ever since.

The office of the firm of Dourdeuore & Dourdeuore is a quiet combination of the past and the present. It is back of the warehouse. The desks are of a period now past. The desks are of a period now past. The drawn crayon portrait of Bertram Dourdeuore, founder of the firm, is old. The fixtures are old. Here and there blends with the new, for while there is some gas, there also is electric lighting, typewriters and automatic telephones.

And Atlee Dourdeuore is as sprightly and up-to-date as any business man in the city of William Penn.

BURNED OLD PAPERS.

Sad to relate there are comparatively few of the papers of long ago of the firm of Dourdeuore remaining. Atlee Dourdeuore destroyed most of them twenty odd years ago.

"There were so many of them and they cumbered the office up so much that one day I gathered them up and threw them into an open fireplaceand burned them up," he says.

"I'm sorry now but it is no use repining.

Yes, I suppose there is interest in a firm such as ours, the oldest in the United States in one family for two generations. What do I think of the business situation and the problems of the times? I don't think we have seen the end of the present depression. We have not been so sane and sensible as we should have been. We will appreciate some day that we have been too wasteful, careless and short-sighted. We have got to do in adjusting our own affairs before undertaking to adjust those of other communities.

"I think the American people never have appreciated the American merchant. The first man here was a trader. The people have paid homage to the manufacturer but rarely to the merchant, yet we never can repay the merchant for what he has done toward the progress of the nation."

FAILURES DROP MANY STOCKS INTO MARKET

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—If you hear rumors of serious weakness in any brokerage houses in Chicago, don't let them loop you awake nights. The situation has been provided for against all probable contingencies. The gust of wind that accompanied exposure of the condition of the Fort Dearborn banks has gone by, and no appreciable remnants of the affair can be seen.

It is well to bear in mind, however, with respect to the whole security market that not only failures but strains not resulting in failures are constantly dropping stocks into the market. This is probably the prime cause of recent weakness. It is a good answer that is not easy to produce if a lot of people interested in stocks get tired and let go.

Nor do these things come exclusively from persons known to be speculators. A merchant who has incurred losses in his own business will relieve himself by selling stocks, and the number of such individuals is so great that any merchant or manufacturer you meet on the street as a matter of chance probably is or has been interested in the game. Thus the large number of commercial failures now occurring means to the stock market a great deal more than the mere stock of such failures or the indications they give of the general business situation.

We are no longer at the mercy of Europe in many matters. Formerly when anything went seriously wrong there or a doubt existed as to American solvency there would be a dumping of stocks from the Eastern Hemisphere, but the people over there do not sell American stocks now because they have comparatively few.

But there are still foreign sources of supply to gratify the heart of the bear leader. A stock in which Chicago has great confidence has been weak in the past two or three days and on inquiry it is found that sales in considerable quantity have been made from Montreal where there were large holdings. It was noticed that Canadian Pacific also had spells of weakness and that there were somewhat movements in Canadian exchange.

The explanation is that the banking situation in Canada is unsatisfactory. The public has been informed of the disposal of the Merchants Bank of Canada, which it turns out is not altogether a disposal.

One other Canadian bank is under investigation. From what other quarters it may be heard and one cannot tell. But the market is liable to get considerable pelting all through the year. Fortunately the big things are out of the way and a market that has kept itself alive under heavy canonade is not likely to run away very far whatever the fuss.

The market turns its nose up and its pence down at the annual graduation now coming out, but it would seem that we have known enough about those things in advance to be fairly well hardened against them. There is nothing startling in the new crop reports thus far. And let us remember that a stock market is a prophecy, not a historical record.

It is only a question whether this barometer most accurate forecaster of events is going to be right this time. For the present the commodity markets are rebuking the stock market even for the moderate rise already scored. Wait and see which knows the most.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND COMMENT

Chase Asks Senate to Probe Alleged Control of Movie Industry

By FRIEDA DAVIS

CANON WILLIAM SHEAFE CHASE, chairman of the Motion Picture Committee of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, threw his hat into the ring yesterday following on the heels of the definite appointment of Will Hays to the position of head of the motion picture industry. He asked a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee to investigate the motion picture situation as it now stands.

A few producers, he contended, are taking matters into their own hands and are almost in a position to control the motion picture screens throughout the country. These men are Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky, heads of the Famous Players-Lasky Co.; Marcus Loew, head of Metro; William Fox, head of the Fox Pictures, and Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film concern.

Ever since Zukor and Lasky combined forces and merged the Lasky Picture Corporation with the Famous Players Co. they have grown stronger. Lately they have taken Paramount Picture concern into their fold. These actions have strengthened them to such an extent that other companies are in danger of being forced against the wall. Mr. Chase declares that the movies are a menace because they are outraging the moral laws of the country and are trying to debauch politics. The appointment of Postmaster General Hays indicates intention of motion pictures heads to enter politics and control elections "from aftermen up." Mr. Hays, Mr. Chase tells, will be asked to defeat bills which will restrict the powers of the big producers.

At present the members of the Senate do not seem to be receiving the suggestions of Mr. Chase with acclaim. Whether or not the laws will be forced remains to be seen.

FOX BUYS A THEATRE.

MEANWHILE, in Salem Fox has not let grass grow under his feet. He has just completed arrangements to build a theatre in Philadelphia, where he will show his films for a long run.

Long have theatrical producers built theatres in which to show their productions and a year ago so was it was reported that David Wark Griffith was contemplating such a step. But that time nothing further has been heard. If the Philadelphia experiment is a success, it is more than probable that other may follow Mr. Fox's example on Broadway.

CECIL DE MILLE STARTS SOON.

CECIL DE MILLE had no sooner set foot on his native heath —New York when he was faced with wires concerning work on his next production, "Manslaughter," which will be, the Lasky forces promise, Mr. De Mille's most pretentious effort. The picture will be adapted from the novel of that name by Alice Duser Miller. Although Mr. De Mille's coadjutor is not known, it is understood that Jeanie Macpherson, who scenarized "Saturday Night," will have the hand in "Manslaughter."

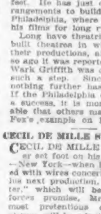
Mr. De Mille, Paul Iribe his art director; Jeanie McPherson, his scenarist, and Clara West, designer of the costumes were in his films, have been consulting concerning the arrangements and are ready to journey across the continent to start the "shooting" immediately.

MAYO FOR TWO-A-DAY.

THE reason for Frank Mayo's sudden departure for the East is explained. He has gone for a tour in vaudeville through the East. He reached New York yesterday and hurried to the managers' offices to discuss contracts, routes and salary. Mrs. Mayo, too, is in New York.

KATHLEEN ARDELLE CHOSEN

KATHLEEN ARDELLE, who has been lending her charms to the Ziegfeld Follies for some time, will play opposite Owen Moore in his latest picture for Selznick. It is reported called in Previous to engagement. Miss Ardelle had a small role in D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street," but aside from that one appearance, she has had no experience in films. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are vacationing in Pinehurst, N. C., at present, but will come North within a few days.



KATHLEEN APPELLE

CAMERA CLICKS.

MABEL BALLIN has dyed her hair and has bought a blonde wig for screen purposes. It makes her look exactly like Lillian Gish, just like Lady Diana Manners, who has been signed by Sir Stuart Blackton film in England. Miss Ballin is ready to begin work on "Hearts Are Trumps," which will be directed by her husband, Hugo Ballin.

THOUGH Mildred Davis has consented to appear opposite Harold Lloyd in Pathe comedies for some time to come, she is anxious to become a serious player. At present her ambitions are to be a feminine Charles Ray, a country girl type.

IRENE RICH has just been cast in her first "dress up" part in "The Call of Home," in which she is playing a leading role for Robertson Cole.

JEWISH DRIVE IS SHORT BY $66,000

Committee Is Confident, However, of Reaching $400,000 Mark

Although the total contributions announced at the dinner at the Elysium Club of the captains and workers in the $400,000 drive of the Boston Federated Jewish Charities were $334,467, the committee is confident of securing the full amount and probably some over when the final figures are given out. Confidence is based on the amount expected from regular subscribers who have not yet donated and anticipated subscriptions from men who are away from home.

The subscription of Nathan Pinanski that the captains and workers organize a permanent body to carry on the work of like nature for any movement of benefit of the community was unanimously adopted. The first meeting to perfect this organization will be held Sunday afternoon, February 5, at the Elysium Club, at this time the final report of the workers will also be made.

Louis P. Kirstein, chairman of the campaign, who presided, lauded the spirit which permeated the drive. He said that the success of the drive furnished this far marks a great Jewish achievement and a credit to the Jewish community of Boston.

Arnold Hartman, one of the leaders in the campaign, suggested that a census of all Jewish people of this city be taken and vital statistics showing the status of all the Jewish residents of greater Boston.

The original quota of the Federation, it was announced, was $388,000. A portion of the sum secured above the quota was to go to the Jewish Hospital. The request of many of the ladies that they be given another week in order to see many prospective subscribers to the Federation was granted.

FREE ENTERTAINMENT AT ROXBURY SCHOOL CENTRE

Next Monday evening, at the Roxbury School Centre, High School of Practical Arts, the Roxbury Welfare Institute of Music offers a program, free to the community, including vocal solos by Mrs. Beatrice Lavery, Mrs. Rona McLellan and Miss Eleanor Ganey; selections for mandolin and guitar by Harry Donnelou and Miss Doris Carr; a violoncello solo by J. M. Lowe and a laughable one-act comedy, "Who Kissed Barbara."

CONNECTICUT MILLS CUT WAGES 20 P. C.

Jewett City, Ct., Jan. 26.—The several mills of the U. S. Finishing Company in eastern Connecticut will cut wages next Monday morning on a reduction in wages of 20 per cent. These mills will even then be paying 10 per cent higher wages than in 1914. Business is now rushing at all finishing plants, but at greatly reduced prices.

$73,550 WANTED FOR PROVIDENCE PARKS

Providence, Jan. 27.—The sum of $73,550 was asked for by the Providence Park Commission with which to continue its work of improving the property and making additions to it. The sum is asked in a bill that has been presented to the General Assembly together with the eighteenth annual report of the commission.

The Following Letters Explain Themselves

6 Beacon Street,
Boston, January 23, 1922.

His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell,
Boston, Mass.

My Dear Cardinal O'Connell:

As you leave for Rome on your important mission, we are moved to express to you what we believe to be the prevailing feeling among the communions that the Federation of Churches in Greater Boston represents.

We are conscious that one of the great and controlling forces of the religious world has passed away. We sympathize with those we recognise as our brethren within the fold of the Roman Catholic Church in the profound sorrow that has come to them, for we understand that in millions of hearts there is real affection for him whom they recognise as the Great Shepherd of the flock. We join with the rest of Christendom in the gratitude for the spiritual service that Pope Benedict XV. has rendered to the world.

At the same time, we who are on the outside of the communion of the Roman Catholic Church recognize that the personality, character and outlook of its supreme Bishop are of great importance not only to the rest of Christendom but to the world. And we are sure that already in our churches and in countless hearts prayer has been offered and will be offered that a great and wise successor may be chosen in the place of the eminent church leader who has completed his service here.

We would wish that this letter, addressed to you, might be interpreted as an expression of sympathy to all the members of the Catholic Communion and of the fellowship of the Church of Christ. Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) ERNEST GRAHAM GUTHRIE,
President of the Federation.
DOREMUS SCUDDER,
Executive Secretary.

January 24, 1922.

Rev. Ernest G. Guthrie,
Federation of Churches of Boston,
Boston, Mass.

My Dear Mr. Guthrie:

I am deeply touched by your message sent in the name of the Federation of Churches. It is a most gratifying evidence of good-will which not only myself but every Catholic appreciates profoundly, and such a spirit of Christian kindliness will surely bear wonderful fruit.

Accept, please, for yourself and all the Federation represented by you, the expression of my most profound gratitude and esteem.
WILLIAM CARDINAL O'CONNELL.

No one can doubt that "such a spirit of Christian kindliness will surely bear wonderful fruit," as Cardinal O'Connell says.

There is a rapidly decreasing amount of religious intolerance among the official representatives of the Christian Church. Strange to say, it diminishes less among the laymen, where for evil, political objects it is fanned frequently into flames.

The disposition for the Protestant churches to federate in matters of universal Christian interest so that they can speak with one voice, as in the instance of its letter to Cardinal O'Connell, is interesting and progressive.

Money Needed at Home

St. Lawrence Waterway Project Would Take Millions That Could Be Used Where U. S. Flag Flies

We are very much impressed by the argument of Harry B. Parsons, the well-known consulting engineer of New York, against the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence tidewater canal, made before the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the City Club last Tuesday evening.

He said that if the St. Lawrence River were used for the purpose of developing power rather than as a canal for the purpose of transportation, it would save 50,000,000 tons of coal a year, because it could develop electrical power equal to the amount which could be developed by 50,000,000 tons of coal in a steam generating plant.

"As the power possibilities of the St. Lawrence are so great," said Mr. Parsons, "it would be a pity to minimize them for a canalization scheme that was not founded on sound judgment."

Under the present scheme of building a canal along the St. Lawrence River, in order to get a more direct route to Liverpool, so that the mid-western freight would not have to pass through Boston, or New York, or Baltimore, or Savannah, or New Orleans or any other American port, the United States is to pay one-half of the cost, or, as Mr. Parsons figures it, $282,000,000. This canal is to be constructed on foreign soil and within the control of a foreign government and would if it were as successful as claimed, take business away from American ports and American railroads. Therefore, Mr. Parsons asks this very pertinent question:

As the estimates of the cost are so large, the question at once arises, "Why should the United States pay half when they will be benefited by only one-sixth the power developed?" At a cost of, say, $50,000 a mile, the United States' share, $282,000,000, would construct 5,600 miles of railway, sufficient to reach from the Mississippi with two lines to the Atlantic seaboard, and also from the Middle West with two lines to the gulf. Let us go slowly before we make a false step.

The argument against the scheme impresses us much more strongly than the argument for it. We are not inclined to believe that it is a good policy to spend so much money in a foreign country where the control of the enterprise must rest entirely within the alien hands. With $300,000,000 we could reclaim millions of arid acres and make grass grow where it never grew before, and we could do it all in our own country and absolutely control the beneficial consequences of it.

Letters to the Editor

De Valera and Ireland

Editor Boston American:

Permit me to say through your paper that in my opinion the Irish Parliament, or Dail Eireann, as it is called, has made a very grievous mistake in eliminating Eamon de Valera. They seem to forget that it was De Valera who through his very clear and forceful presentation of the Irish cause before our public, rallied millions of people, including myself, to the support of Sinn Fein.

Would also like to state that I believe the Irish people should be a little more spontaneous in their expressions of gratitude to William Randolph Hearst, who through the world's greatest advertising medium, his newspapers, has always given the fullest measure of publicity and support to any movement for good for Ireland.

JAPAN WILL HAVE HUGE AIR FLEET

Money Saved on Battleships Will Be Used to Purchase Enough Bombers and Combat Planes to Darken the Sky

By John Goldstrom,
Universal Service Special Correspondent

(Former special agent for the Air Mail Service, who flew from New York to San Francisco with the first through transcontinental air mail pouch. He is a member of the Aero Club of Southern California, and has studied the Japanese problem in relation to Japan's air program.)

WASHINGTON Jan. 27.—Japan undoubtedly will divert her savings on battleships under the 5-5-3 agreement to still greater expansion of her already menacing air program.

For the price of one capital ship you can darken the sky with bombers and combat planes. Forty-five million dollars will buy about 3,000 military planes.

The American army air service bombing tests proved that a small fleet of bombers, each about $15,000 apiece, can make junk of a great warship in a few minutes.

The so-called Disarmament Conference was called to consider limitation of naval armament and the fortifications of the Pacific. The most important problem of the Pacific is the increasing menace of the Japanese air program, now intensified by naval limitation. It should have had special consideration by the conference, and must have at the next conference.

It has been generally known by newspaper readers that since the armistice Japan has been energetically developing her air forces. In addition to buying great quantities of material and planning factories she has imported between seven and eight hundred European veterans of the World War to teach her young Japanese in fly bombers, combat and other military planes.

Inducements to Americans

Japanese agents this year even went so far as to offer special inducements to American aviators, particularly on the Pacific coast, to become instructors in Japan. Emory H. Rogers, head of Rogers' Airport at Los Angeles (killed recently in a fall), was offered tempting financial inducements to take his fleet of planes and his equipment to Japan. He declined, as did others.

The end of the war sent thousands of aviators back to civil life who were reluctant to give up flying. Opportunities in commercial aviation were extremely few. Pilots' jobs in the air mail were limited to half a hundred—for which there were 2,500 applicants; and for every vacancy created by the formerly frequent fatalities there were scores of applications.

A large number went to Southern California, hoping to get work in the movies, but the supply was far greater than the demand. There is more passenger lying done in and near Los Angeles than in any other part of the country, but even this is greatly overcrowded. There are pilots out there now who are glad to make $35 a week.

But be it said to the credit of the general run of American fliers, very few of them were willing to help Japan prepare for a possible invasion by her air forces of the Pacific Coast.

One of the least excusable phases of unemployment in the United States is the idleness of thousands of aviators trained by the Government at great expense and cast adrift after the war. It constitutes a greater waste than the billion dollars wasted on the American aircraft programme during the war.

See Hope in Commerce

There is hope in the proposed commercial aviation bureau in the Department of Commerce and in the President's suggestions for legislation designed to encourage aviation, but the United States has failed deplorably in its duty to an industry and a science whose very inception was in this country.

Aviation in every other country rated as a power has been aided by government subsidy and other forms of substantial encouragement. It has been discouraged in the United States, principally by the wholesale dumping on the market and into the air mail service of antiquated and inadequate surplus war material. A great part of the many accidents which have occurred have been chargeable to this dumping.

George Stevenson, aeronautical engineer of the Aero Club of Southern California, said recently that there is no immediate hope for the future of commercial aviation in the United States until the surplus war material has been worked off.

Meanwhile Japan, following the example of England, has been scrapping its old planes and buying new ones as rapidly as possible. It is not only increasing its equipment and personnel, but is making use of every new development in the mechanics of flying.

England, France and Italy still have greater flying forces than has Japan, but Japan's rate of increase has been greater than this country and will be still greater now that she can divert money from battleship building.

An official of the American Army Air Service said in Washington the other day that no one except the Japanese themselves knows the extent of their aircraft development. Foreign military attaches have been prevented, politely but firmly, from finding out.

It is known that Japan has been planning a large fleet of airplane carriers, but she would not need even these should she decide on an invasion of our Western coast. A fleet of merchant ships could depart, one by one, from Japanese ports, carrying any number of unassembled planes and bombs, both gas and explosive. The planes could be assembled on the way over. Runways from which the planes could leave shipboard would be constructed, and the entire fleet, or fleets, of planes could take off from convenient points off the Pacific coast.

It doesn't require the mind of a jingoist to imagine what could be done to cities like San Francisco and Los Angeles in the work of an hour. And there is nothing to prevent it. Recently our air forces on the coast at Hawaii and in the Philippines have been reorganized, and in some places slightly strengthened, but there is nothing approaching effective protection.

Our Pitiful Resources

Fortifications of Guam and the establishment there of a strong air base for scouting purposes would help a little in the way of prevention, but there seems to be no present disposition to do anything about it.

How pitiful the airplane resources of the United States really are was revealed when the railroad strike threatened. Postmaster-General Hays was informed that only 750 planes could be mobilized for active service in carrying the mails. The army could have contributed few more, with its depleted personnel.

Because of the reduced appropriations even the airplane forest patrol, operated by army pilots, had to be curtailed this year to such an extent that millions of dollars' worth of timber was destroyed for lack of adequate reports on the new forest fires.

The airplane industry generally is at its lowest ebb, and capital cannot be induced to invest in it to any notable extent because of the lack of interest heretofore by the government.

In the last half of the ten-year naval holiday England will have regained her position as mistress of the seas and Japan will have achieved the mastery of the air, at least on the Pacific. Meek Uncle Sam may inherit the earth, or as much of it as the stronger powers permit him to have, unless Congress is awakened to the pressing need for the development of aviation in the United States, both military and commercial.

TAKE A LOOK AT YOURSELF.

If you were boss in the shop where you work, what would you expect of the man in the position you now occupy?

Stop and think this over and then ask yourself what a man in your position could do to make himself most useful in the business.

If you answer these questions honestly to yourself you may conclude that you are not living up to the standard you would require in like position.

Most of us need more thought on "what would I do in another's place?"

Most of us could improve a whole lot if we would be perfectly unbiased in passing judgment on our own acts.

In order to do this try to eliminate the idea of showing yourself favor.

Look at yourself as if you were another person.

Analyze yourself as from the outside, but with the more perfect knowledge which you possess in your own case.

Times a plenty you might have saved yourself humiliation of criticism on something which you knew better than to do if you had looked upon yourself as an outsider and required it of yourself not to impose on yourself.

Sounds funny, does it not?

This point of view will get you farther up hill than you are at present.

IF THIS OLD PLANET CAME TO A STOP

By Garrett P. Serviss
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Subjects of Scientific Interest.

THE following letter explains itself, and the answer follows:

"J. G." asks what would happen if the earth stopped suddenly. I beg to differ with Garrett P. Serviss as to what would happen. There is no friction in space, as there is when a meteor collides with our atmosphere. The thing that would really happen is, if the earth suddenly stopped in its orbit around the sun, that it would fall into the sun in a short time. The only thing that prevents its falling into the sun is its orbital motion.

"G. H., Chicago."

For clearness of understanding it is necessary to say that my answer to "J. G's" question was, in substance, that the earth if instantaneously arrested in its orbital motion would be turned into a nebulous cloud by the sudden transformation of its kinetic energy into heat.

It is to this statement that "G. H." takes exception. The matter is worth discussion because of its bearing upon the whole subject of the transformations of energy, which often occur in every-day life without being understood.

Time Required for Falls

The absence of a resisting medium like air in outer space is not pertinent to the question, because it is predicated to begin with that the stoppage takes place, without any suggestion as to the cause of the stoppage. The precise nature of the obstacle or resistance would make no difference, provided that a sudden arrest occurred.

Friction is only an agent acting to arrest the motion of a flying body by transforming its kinetic energy, or energy of movement, into the molecular vibration called heat.

If the arrest was instantaneous and complete the heat would all be developed at the point where the stoppage occurred. That is the case assumed by the question—a sudden and complete stoppage of the earth. The answer that I gave is correct.

Nevertheless, "G. H." is right with regard to the falling of the earth to the sun if it had no orbital velocity. Assuming that the earth stood still it would surely fall into the sun unless some other body interfered by drawing it aside. If in its fall it passed very near Venus its path would be deflected and it might miss the sun. But if there were not deflecting influence the fall would be direct toward the centre of the sun. Perhaps "G. H." would be interested in knowing how long the fall would last, and how the time needed for such a fall can be calculated for the earth or any other planet.

Friction Only an Agent

The earth, then, would fall to the sun from the mean distance in its orbit, i. e., a little less than 93,000,000 miles, in 64.576 days. Jupiter, falling from a distance of 483,000,000 miles, would take more than two years to reach the sun. The moon would fall to the earth in four and five-sixth days. The explanation of these calculations is as follows:

By Kepler's laws of planetary motion the squares of the times of revolution or periods, of all planets are proportional to the cubes of the semi-major axes of the orbits, i. e., their mean distance from the sun.

Now, since the earth's orbit, which is actually nearly a circle, to be transformed into an infinitely narrow ellipse, then the sun would be at one end of the ellipse and the orbital motion of the earth would be represented by a straight to and fro motion between the sun and the outer end of the ellipse, and one complete oscillation in this orbit would be its period, or time of revolution. But the semi-major axis of the infinitely narrow ellipse would be equal to one-half the semi-major axis, or mean distance, of the actual orbit. And the motion of the earth in passing from the outer to the inner (or sun) end of its orbit would be virtually a fall.

Our Pitiful Resources

How pitiful the airplane resources of the United States really are was revealed when the railroad strike threatened. Postmaster-General Hays was informed that only 750 planes could be mobilized for active service in carrying the mails. The army could have contributed few more, with its depleted personnel.

Because of the reduced appropriations even the airplane forest patrol, operated by army pilots, had to be curtailed this year to such an extent that millions of dollars' worth of timber was destroyed for lack of adequate reports on the new forest fires.

The airplane industry generally is at its lowest ebb, and capital cannot be induced to invest in it to any notable extent because of the lack of interest heretofore by the government.

In the last half of the ten-year naval holiday England will have regained her position as mistress of the seas and Japan will have achieved the mastery of the air, at least on the Pacific. Meek Uncle Sam may inherit the earth, or as much of it as the stronger powers permit him to have, unless Congress is awakened to the pressing need for the development of aviation in the United States, both military and commercial.

STANDARD OF LIVING DEPENDS ON YOU

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

HEALTH and a day was all that Emerson, the Yankee sage, wanted to make ridiculous the pomp and pride of royalty.

There, without going into details, you have a standard of living which ought to appeal to the self-respecting, self-dependent, democratic American.

But, as it happens, the material matter of living is a series of very concrete facts, and therefore needs to be gone into with considerable detail.

What we want and what, in addition, we think we need are factors in determining not only our modes of living but our financial demand and the consequent destinies of political and economic systems.

At the heart of the anti-Japanese agitation of the Pacific coast is just this class of standards, economic and personal.

The hostile Caucasian does not care to compete with lower standards than those which, after ages of struggle, he has established as representing the modest-enough aspirations of the average white man.

So, too, our American high tariff wall has been justified as the means of maintaining the standard of living of our laboring masses, shutting out the product of foreign workers who are accustomed to a smaller wage and a lower scale of living.

Gap Widened

At any rate, that is the professed reason for the protective tariff, which—of course only incidentally—has artificially stimulated immigration, overfattened many millionaires, complicated our community problems and widened the gap between the rich and the poor.

But the fact remains that, through many contributing causes, the average American has a higher standard of living than obtains anywhere else on earth.

Herein one may be self-deceived. One may easily lay too much stress on mere physical comforts. They do not matter so much as we think. For instance, your American is proud of the prevalence of bathtubs here—and your Englishman retorts that other people, too, take baths, but they do not boast about it.

And we have more electric lights in our houses; we eat better food (or more); we wear better clothes, have more carpets and rugs on our floors, have more pianos, more motors, more movies, to everything.

Well, suppose we have! These things are all relative. You can only eat three square meals a day—and that is too much for your health and comfort! Your body can only be covered, under unconvered, though clothed. You can only be housed—and the palace does that in no wise appreciably better than your three-decker apartment house, and this latter not much more satisfactorily than a European or Asiatic hovel.

Food, clothing, shelter are the primary needs. The more and the better are not so important as we make them.

The Wants of Man

When we talk of the standard of living, this is all that occurs to most of us. And we want wages or salary or income—or money somehow, anyhow!—to be able to indulge ourselves in necessaries and luxuries.

Things and things and things! And so, things are in the saddle!

Well, one needs not be an ascetic to say that you should have no more of material goods—whether they are millionaire's or day laborer—than your spirit can dominate.

If you do not like that language, see if your self-respect can survive under the suggestion that you illustrate that argument in the case of by dead matter. You do, if the wanting and getting and having of things—even more than the mere abundant life, of which Jesus and all the significant seers, philosophers and poets have sung.

So when you talk of the standard of living, this is what you should have in mind: a standard which depends not upon others but upon yourself; one which can be measured not by wage, salary and income, but by your spiritual capacity.

Buddha was of royal birth. He gave up all in order to share the life of the humblest. He became one of the saviors of mankind.

Jesus, a carpenter, a wandering preacher among His people, Son of Man, who had not where to lay His head—yet with loving heart and godly soul, is the pre-eminent Apostle of the abundant life.

So you yourself can raise your standard of living. You may not aspire to become saint or seer or savior—though why not?

But even as a simple, self-respecting, self-dependent, democratic American—knowing that the average may become what the best have been—you can live according to an inner standard which makes negligible all that money can buy.
